DIARY MAY BE MURDER CLEW

NAMES REVEALED IN BOOK SHOW AFFAIRS INVOLVING BEAUTY

Scotland Yard Aids Probe
Of Death Of Heiress

NEW YORK, June 11.—“There were several persons in the life of Starr Faithfull who would have been happier if she were dead.”

This cryptic statement by District Attorney Elvin Edwards today accompanied the intensive examination of the personal diary of the young Greenwich Village beauty, whose murdered body was found on the silent sands of Long Beach, Long Island.

The contents of the leather-bound book with the silver clasps in which the slain girl recorded her innermost thoughts was expected by authorities to solve New York's most vivid murder in a decade.

There are many names in the little book which 25-year-old Starr thought nobody would ever see. Most of those names are of men—men Starr knew many men. How prominent they were is a matter of waiting for twenty-four hours to pass.

“But there were rich men and no beggar men or thieves,” said one detective today.

While the district attorney would not go into details about the contents of the diary, it was learned that the notations were colorful, emotional and marked with the Pseudo-Literary style of a girl who wanted to be a writer.

Young Starr was funny that way. She wanted to live and write. She unfortunately learned to live so fast that she never got down to writing—much. Some manuscripts—half finished—have been hidden away by her step-father, Stanley E. Faithfull, and her mother. A similar natural instinct to shield the private thoughts of Starr led her parents to keep the “love-diary” secret until detectives discovered it.

LONDON, June 11.—Scotland Yard, Britain's famous organization for the tracking down and prosecution of criminals, took active measures today to aid in solving the mysterious slaying of Miss Starr Faithfull, New York heiress whose body was washed up on a Long Island beach a few days ago. Preparations were made to question officers of the Cunard liner Franconia, from which the murdered girl was put off in the outer harbor of New York shortly after the vessel sailed for England on May 23.

Scotland Yard operatives faced an arduous task. The Franconia was docked immediately after her arrival at Southampton and her personnel released for their annual vacation.

The ship is not scheduled to sail again until July 10. Her officers and men are scattered throughout the British Isles, either in their homes or vacation resorts, but Scotland Yard planned to question every one of the liner's officers regarding reports the girl had been seen in an intoxicated and hysterical condition aboard the ship a little while before she was placed aboard a tug in the harbor and sent back to New York.

BLOODHOUNDS USED IN MURDER SEARCH

LOUISA, Ky., June 11.—Bloodhounds were unleashed in the hills of Kentucky near here today as authorities pressed an intensive search for the murderer of John Adkins, 65, reputedly wealthy merchant of Twin Branch.

With his skull fractured and a knife wound in his throat, Adkins' body was found in his bachelor apartment last yesterday by officials who sought him when he failed to appear at circuit court where he was plaintiff in a robbery case.

Probability of a robbery motive was strongly suggested in the mystery surrounding Adkins' death. It was learned that only a few days ago he withdrew $8,000 from Louisa banks, stating at the time that the money “would be safer in my pocket.”

Scientists Attempt To Explain Ohio Earth Shock; Advance New Theories

Hole In Ground Near Investigations

TOLEDO, O., June 11.—The tiny village of Malinta, O., thirty-five miles southwest of here, was a mecca of scientific investigation today as authorities on meteors and explosive experts sought to determine the cause of the terrific shock that jarred northwestern Ohio early yesterday.

A mammoth hole, ten feet in depth and of considerable length and width, which was discovered near by Malinta, apparently held the solution. Some believe the hole was torn by a huge meteor. Others contend it was ripped by a powerful explosive blast.

No trace of a meteor was found at the scene of the hole, but some scientists pointed out that it was possible that a meteor might have changed its course after entering the ground and buried itself several feet away from the hole.

Experts on explosives discounted the theory that the hole might have been torn by a quantity of nitroglycerine. They declared that nitro glycerine of sufficient quantity to have caused the earth shock yesterday would have torn a much larger hole. Insofar as could be learned, it was said, there was no quantity of explosives being transported near Malinta yesterday.

Rev. F. L. Odenbach, noted astronomer of John Carroll University in Cleveland, expressed the opinion that it would have been entirely possible for a meteor to have caused a shock similar to that which rocked this section of the state yesterday.

It was particularly terrific in this section of Ohio. At Findlay, thirty miles away, the jar was so strong that it was believed a nitroglycerin plant near the town had exploded. Houses were shaken and persons were awakened from their sleep.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 11.—What was described today as a “brilliant meteor” was sighted here last night by many persons. It appeared in the sky early last evening. Some said a trail of smoke lingered several seconds after the meteor passed.

UTICA, N. Y., June 11.—A large ball of fire which was sighted here last night was believed to have been a meteor. It fell from high in the sky and left a trail of white, resembling smoke. Some witnesses said tiny sparks dotted the smoke trail.

COLUMBUS, O., June 11.—A plot to destroy objectionable property or even to commit murder may be concealed in the mystery of the explosion at Malinta, O., which rocked northwestern Ohio yesterday, Prof. J. Ernest Carman, of Ohio State University, noted authority on meteors, suggested here today.

Expressing skepticism about the theory that the disturbance might have been caused by a falling meteor, Prof. Carman said that authorities may find that “somebody wanted to get rid of something.”

Professor Carman declared that “ninety-nine out of every 100 meteor stories are untrue.” “If the hole at Malinta was caused by a falling meteor,” he asked, “what happened to the meteor and how did it get out of the hole?”

SETTLEMENT HOLDS UP DIVORCE PLANS

SAN FRANCISCO, June 11.—Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor will get a divorce but not until they can agree on a property settlement, it was indicated today.

Their attorneys yesterday spent two hours vainly trying to decide on the distribution of their joint possession. The other problems, which should ask for the divorce and where, can be decided, the lawyers said, easily.

“We have made excellent progress,” the attorneys said. “The divorce is inevitable and only awaits settlement of this one point.”

The lawyers were going back one to Reno to see the former heavyweight champion of the world, the other to Los Angeles to interview the movie actress, in another attempt to solve the difficulty. They will meet again in several weeks, they said.

RICHARD LOEB IS 26 YEARS OLD NOW

JOLIET, Ill., June 11.—Richard Loeb was to celebrate his twenty-sixth birthday today, his seventh in the Illinois State Penitentiary where he is serving a life term for the slaying of young Bobby Franks. Loeb, an employee of the greenhouse at Stateville Prison would be permitted to see members of his family and receive presents of food from them.

ABANDON HOPE FOR RESCUING EIGHTEEN MEN

Rescue Ships Fail To Make Contact With Wrecked Sub

SHANGHAI, June 11.—Hope of rescuing the eighteen men entombed in the sunken submarine Poseidon 120 feet under water in the Yellow Sea was virtually abandoned today when rescue ships failed, despite frantic efforts, to establish contact with the wreck.

Admiralty divers who descended to the submarine were unable to attach rescue apparatus to it and reported that they heard no response to their signals to the prisoners. Their repeated rappings of Morse code letters on the side of the submarine brought no response.

A message from the aircraft carrier Hermes at the scene of the disaster denied reports that divers had heard signals from a compartment containing eight of the men saying that they were still alive.

The American submarine salvage vessel Pigeon, equipped with special rescue apparatus, hastened from Tsingtao to help the British cruisers Berwick and Cumberland, the destroyer Storm Cloud, the sloop Marathon and the tug St. Brock at the scene of the accident.

The only hope of the entombed men lay in the use of the Davis third lung apparatus with which British submarines were recently equipped. This is a combination of a life belt and oxygen mask. If the mask is attached to the big submarine oxygen tanks the user may succeed in living a long time.

Forty-five minutes after the Poseidon was rammed by the Yuta, four men came up in these newly-invented life belts. The submarine sank within two minutes after the accident and thirty-one members of the crew saved their lives by jumping overboard. These were picked up by the Yuta.

FRANK HAWKS GOES TO GET HAIRCUT

ROME, June 11.—Captain Frank Hawks, famous American flying ace, treated himself to an artistic Italian haircut today. Objecting to German methods of cutting hair because a Berlin barber cut too much off the top of his head, Hawks hopped into his plane yesterday and sped across the Alps to Rome in the record time of three hours, thirty-one minutes.

HAMILTON, O., June 11.—With Marion, O., selected as the 1932 convention city, the 79th Great Council of Red Men was adjourned today.

Professor Discounts Meteor Theory In Strange Blast

CLEVELAND, June 11.—A meteor could not have caused the mysterious earth shock which rocked northwestern Ohio for miles in the vicinity of Malinta, O., early yesterday.

Definitely aligning himself against the theory that a celestial body had crashed to the earth with terrific force, Professor J. J. Nassau of Case University Observatory today made that statement in an exclusive interview with International News Service.

“A meteor,” Professor Nassau, a recognized astronomical authority, repeated, large enough to cause the shock reported at Malinta could not possibly have fallen without being observed throughout the eastern section of the United States. The vicinity of the spot where it dug into the earth would have been lighted as in broad daylight.

Observers at the university reported no meteorites visible here after 9 o'clock Tuesday night, the professor stated. One meteor was observed for about two seconds about that time. It burned out almost immediately, he said.

Asked to advance a theory for the terrific earth shock, Professor Nassau declined to comment, saying he was not sufficiently familiar with that phase of science.

With the astronomer's positive declaration that the shock was not caused by a meteorite, geologists here united today in quest of a solution of the phenomenon which frightened residents out of their sleep, shattered windows for miles in the vicinity of Malinta, disrupted communication lines and caused other damage.

Two possible solutions for the appearance of the large hole at Malinta were advanced by Rev. F. L. Odenbach of John Carroll University, an authority on earthquakes. Either a shifting of a quakes and strata beneath the earth's crust, or a subterranean water hole or river which might have eaten away the earth from underneath, would create a hole in the earth similar to the one reported, he said. Rev. Odenbach did not believe the small crater was caused by an earthquake shock.

Ignition of an unknown natural gas strata under the ground from friction caused by a sudden shifting of the earth could easily have accounted for the terrific earth shock, some scientists believed. Such an explosion, however, it was stated, would have blown fragments of earth into the air in large quantities.

Among those presented were Mrs. James Gaylord Baldwin of Columbus, O., and Mrs. Herbert C. Greer, Morgantown, W. Va.

GAMBLING DEVICES AND LIQUOR SEIZED IN RAID WEDNESDAY

John Friend Faces
Federal Charge
In Dayton

Elaborate gambling paraphernalia was seized in a raid conducted jointly by county, federal and state officers who battered down locked doors and searched what they described as a combined “club house” and gambling establishment operated by John Friend, reputed bootlegger, on the Dayton-Xenia Pike, in Greene County, near the Greene-Montgomery County line Wednesday night.

The raiding officers swooped down upon the picturesque stone bungalow between 9 and 10 o'clock selecting a time when they believed comparatively few “guests” would be present to patronize the establishment.

Dividing their forces, the nine officers who took part in the raid, rushed the three outside entrances to the bungalow simultaneously only to encounter barred doors. Sheriff John Baughan and his deputies sought to enter the rear door but Mrs. Mary Friend, wife of the proprietor, is said to have refused them admittance, whereupon the raiders, armed with sledge hammers, broke in each of the three doors at once.

In the cellar, the officers discovered a secret door in a wall leading to a beer compartment, they said. No beer was found but between fifty and seventy-five empty beer kegs were confiscated. They also found a strong room containing an air compressor and beer-cooling apparatus, the equipment being completely attached, they reported.

Upon entering the cellar, the officers said they encountered Friend, owner of the bungalow, who was said to be engaged in breaking up beer kegs. The raiders seized two kegs and a quantity of wine. They poured out some of the wine but kept a few jugs for evidence.

The gambling equipment seized, brought to the county jail here, included a pool table, a dice or (Continued on Page Ten)

FORMER CONSUL IS HELD AS FUGITIVE

CHICAGO, June 11.—John C. Popovici, former Rumanian vice consul to Chicago and Cleveland, O., was to be given a hearing today on a fugitive warrant sworn to by Mrs. Mary Moian.

Mrs. Moian charges she furnished the $1,000 bond on which Popovici obtained his freedom in Cleveland after an action for non-support was brought against him by his wife, Helen.

Popovici, according to Mrs. Moian, forfeited the bond and came to Chicago. She followed, she said, to get him returned to Cleveland. Instead, according to her story, he persuaded her to advance him another $1,000 to finance a wholesale egg business.

ASSEMBLY INVITED

COLUMBUS, O., June 11.—An invitation to the entire general assembly to attend the public reception for President and Mrs. Herbert Hoover in the statehouse rotunda here Tuesday afternoon has been extended by H. P. Wolfe, chairman of the reception committee, it was announced today.

COMING MARRIAGE WILL UNITE WEALTH

LONDON, June 11.—Climaxing a friendship of many years' standing, notice of intended marriage was filed at a registry office here today by Anthony Drexel Biddle, Jr., member of the wealthy and prominent Philadelphia family, and Mrs. Margaret Schulze, daughter of the late William Boyce Thompson of Yonkers, N. Y.

Both gave their ages as 34. Biddle was divorced from his first wife, the former Mary L. Duke, in Newburgh, N. Y. last March. At that time, it was reported he would be married to Mrs. Schulze as soon as her divorce from Theodore Schultz became final.

The forthcoming marriage will link two of America's wealthiest and most socially prominent families. Mrs. Schulze inherited a huge fortune upon the death of William Boyce Thompson recently.

Biddle and Mrs. Schulze obtained a license to marry at the same time they filed notice of their intentions, it was revealed. Neither was reachable today, but it was believed the ceremony will take place at the registry before the end of the week.

Home Of Non-Striking Miner Wrecked By Explosion

STEUBENVILLE, O., June 11.—A bomb was hurled at the home of a non-striking coal mine employee near here early today, inaugurating, it was feared, the use of violence in a program of mine disorders which recently spread to Ohio from western Pennsylvania.

The explosive, which barely missed a window in a bedroom where H. G. Malin, a non-union stand-patter, was sleeping, shattered other windows and wrecked the plaster in the house.

Although not actually threatened by strikers who have affiliated with the National Miners' Union, Malins said he heard yesterday that his home would be bombed unless he quit work and joined the movement to unionize all mines in this section.

Authorities said they believed the bomb was thrown by the strikers because a “quit work or be blown up” command has been sent to non-striking throughout this area.

Acting upon warnings from mine operators that communist agitators from the Pennsylvania fields have moved to Ohio, sheriffs of Jefferson, Belmont and Harrison Counties yesterday strengthened their forces to prevent anticipated outbreaks.

Additional special deputies were employed to keep order, and officials said they would do all possible to assure the safety of workmen.

Today's bombing, according to officials, is the outbreak which has been expected for several days. Demanding an eight-hour day and the right to affiliate with unions, more than 1000 employees are now on strike at the properties of five mines in this section.

PLANS BILL TO CONTROL RADIO

Would Halt Lottery
Broadcasting

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Congressional action to control advertising over the radio, particularly to prohibit lottery advertising now illegal in newspapers will be demanded in the next session of congress, Rep. E. L. Davis (D) of Tennessee announced today.

The bill which he will present to congress, Davis emphasized, is designed to place a ban on advertising on the same plane as that of newspapers and to avoid censorship by any commission.

He also is considering legislation to prohibit firms from soliciting business by radio in states where it is unlawful for them to solicit.

Davis said: “Under present federal law, newspapers or other publications containing lottery advertising are unallowable. There is no law applying to radios, and the Federal Radio Commission has declined to interfere with this class of advertising.”

“It has been the consistent policy of the federal government to prohibit lotteries and kindred schemes to the extent of its power. There are plenty of precedents for exercise of congressional action in the case of radio advertising.”

PREMIER ATTACKED ON TREATY DELAY

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Intense activity in Canada to force Premier Bennett to negotiate a treaty for building of the St. Lawrence seaway was reported here today by the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater Association.

The Canadian premier is being subjected to severe criticism because he has not accepted the invitation of the United States, voiced last September 15, to name commissioners to plan the building of the vast waterway designed to put inland Canada and the United States “on the ocean front.”

GIRL'S BODY FOUND

COUNTRY SHOULD BE THANKFUL FOR WISE LEADERS SAYS FESS

Praises President In Address; Scores Carping Critics

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Instead of carping criticism over hard times the country should be thankful that it has had through this period “the wise leadership” of President Hoover, Senator Simon D. Fess, chairman of the Republican national committee declared in an address today to several hundred young Republicans at a party conference.

The young Republicans were invited to the conference by their respective members of the national committee, and after a two-day session will return to their homes to promote party organization for the 1932 campaign. Several cabinet officers will address them tomorrow.

Senator Fess' speech was devoted to laudation of the Republican party's history, from its foundation to the present, and to extolling the leadership of President Hoover.

“Instead of conceding the wise leadership in this time of distress,” he said, “carping criticism and belittling comment have become the daily pastime of our opponents.” “This generation will not likely fully appreciate the services of President Hoover in the part he has played in lessening the suffering during this period of world-wide depression.”

“At such times critics are many and partisan criticism is bitter. All sorts of unsound nostrums and remedies are proposed, and passion and prejudice are appealed to for action.”

“The need of the hour is a leader with a vision to comprehend the problem and the courage to withstand organized clamor.”

“As was recently said, ‘we should be thankful we have at the head of the nation a man who is the embodiment of all that is capable, strong, patient, sympathetic; all that is protective, conservative, purposeful and beneficial. Such a man is President Hoover.’”

The history of the progress of the country, he said, is the history of the Republican party. He pictured the party as standing like a rock for sound money, protective tariff and other economic issues, while the Democrats “went from nostrum to nostrum.”

The chairman clearly indicated that the Republican leadership realizes it is going to have to combat the “depression issue” in the next campaign. The present de-

SENATE COMMITTEE MAKES SMALL SLASH IN APPROPRIATION

Entire Building Sum
For Institution

The tentative biennial budget submitted on behalf of the O. S. and S. O. Home here for 1931-32 was approved, almost in its entirety, by the Ohio senate finance committee Wednesday, reductions totalling only $34,500 for the two-year period.

Taking the position that as much as this state institution has been sorely neglected for years and now is having a rapid growth in commitments as a result of the World War, the committee deemed it necessary to begin expansion work at the Home and to place old dilapidated structures in condition for use.

Every item for new buildings, improvements and betterments, totalling $760,000, was said to have been approved, notwithstanding the fact the committee has deleted virtually all such items for every other institution and department budget.

While institution officials had asked for an increased food budget in order to raise the standard from eight cents a meal to thirteen cents, and take care of increased population, the committee reduced the food item $8,000 for the first year and $17,000 for the second year on the ground that food is getting cheaper. Food allowances, however, were left at considerable above the last appropriations.

Another item of $6,500 deleted was for the publication of a history of the institution, prepared by Edward W. Hughes, parliamentary officer of the House of Representatives, a former pupil of the Home.

Though the tentative budget for the institution provided for salary increases for fourteen teachers and other employees, the committee, after much wrangling, voted to adhere to its policy of allowing no salary increases this year.

The requests of the Home for the two-year period, totalling $1,979,429.25, including $407,700 for personal service, $738,729.25 for maintenance and $833,000 for additions and betterments.

All proposed new construction at Wilberforce University was deleted and its maintenance budget was ordered cut to the bone. Wilberforce suffered a further slash of $13,000.

VATICAN FEARS FIGHT IS LOST

Reopening Of Clubs
Seems Remote

ROME, June 11.—Practically all hope that the church would be granted the right to reopen the Catholic Lay Clubs closed by the Fascist Government, was given up today in a statement issued by the Holy See in comment on the Italian government's answer to the Vatican's protest on the closing of the clubs.

Pope Pius XI, it was said, had particularly looked for conciliatoriness in view of the fact that his Holiness had appealed to King Victor Emmanuel, as one of the signatories to the Lateran Treaty which the Vatican claimed had been violated by the Italian government.

Not only was this lacking, but it was obvious that “Premier Mussolini pursues his own policy,” the Vatican spokesman said, adding that Mussolini apparently had no intention to permit the reopening of the Catholic Clubs and youth associations.

GOVERNOR WILL AID PROBLEM OF SOLONS

COLUMBUS, O., June 11.—Possibility that Governor George White may attempt to guide the state legislature out of its slough of budget difficulties loomed here today when it was understood that the chief executive is planning another message to the legislators.

Reports will deliver the message, which would be his fourth, either before adjournment of the legislature the latter part of this week or early next week.

NO WEDDING BELLS, SAYS LITA

Former Wife Of Chaplin, Only 23, Will Hesitate Before Next Leap

BY BONITA WITT
Central Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, June 11.—Lita Grey, Chaplin, youthful ex-wife of the screen star, is getting a bit weary of denying that she is to wed Georges Carpentier, the former boxer, or any of the other gentlemen with whom her name has been linked.

"Education comes first," she says. "Then, if they are talented and they want to follow their father's and my profession, I will not stand in their way. I do think, however, that they will have a hard time living up to their father's reputation. I do not want them to grow up in the theater with education secondary."

When Charlie and Sidney are in New York they live in the country with Mrs. Chaplin's mother, where they can play and live natural lives. Although Lita, herself, plays with Charlie in "The Kid" at the age of twelve, she doesn't believe that the theater or movie lot is for them.

Despite the bitterness which characterized their separation, Mrs. Chaplin says that she and her former husband are on friendly terms. When she and the children, Charlie, Jr., six, and Sidney, five, are in California they call on him frequently, usually staying for dinner.

The youngsters frolic and renew their acquaintance with their daddy whom they seldom see. "There's no reason why the children should know that their parents have had a big quarrel," Lita explains. They always are taken to see his pictures and talk of him constantly, although he seldom finds time to visit them.

If the children desire to go on the stage or into the movies when they are older, their mother will not object, but she insists that they must first finish their education.

HOLLYWOOD AND MARRIAGE

Lita also is firm in her convictions about Hollywood romances. "Hollywood is bad for married happiness," she confides. "It seems as if everyone is looking for scandal, just hoping for a separation. Of course that didn't enter into our case. Our marriage couldn't last. We were so different in background and he was much older than I. A man of the world wedded to a 16-year-old child! The ordinary marriage, however, seldom turn out happily in Hollywood. The boy is making a picture with a beautiful leading lady—perhaps they are on location together for months. The girl is playing opposite a fascinating hero. Those situations do not make for a happy marriage."

Thus the beautiful Mrs. Chaplin, who labors on the three-day circuit, despite the large settlement which she was awarded, sums up her estimate of marriage in the film colony.

Consider your Adam's Apple!!* Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

Everyone has an Adam's Apple—every man—every woman has one. Touch your Adam's Apple with your finger. You are actually touching your larynx—this is your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. When you consider your Adam's Apple, you are considering your throat—your vocal chords.

"TOASTING" expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE—the modern cigarette. We sell these expelled irritants to manufacturers of chemical compounds. Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why the "TOASTING" Process includes the use of Ultra Violet Rays. LUCKY STRIKE—made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED"—an extra, secret and exclusive heating process. It is this process that expels these harsh irritants. No wonder 20,679 American physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating. No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple." Be careful in your choice of cigarettes.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

And every one that hath forsaken house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for mine sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life.—St. Matthew, xx, 29.

THE BEST MOVIES

An unfortunate thing happens in many cities, when some fine movie picture, produced under high standards of dramatic and pictorial art, fails to draw as much patronage as some less desirable film. Managers of picture theatres regret such a result, but if such pictures are not well patronized, it seems inevitable that less desirable kinds will be shown.

Moving pictures have a profound influence over the country. People throng into the picture theatres, and if a certain set of ideas is prominent in these films, many people will acquire them.

Assailing undesirable pictures sometimes does more harm than good, by advertising them, so that many morbid curiosity seekers turn out to be thrilled by their questionable suggestions. When the people decline to patronize an undesirable picture, the most effective form of censorship takes effect.

People who cherish high standards can do much to encourage the best pictures, if they would take more pains to patronize films of that character. They remark that frequently they do not know which are the pictures of the best type. A service is therefore rendered when organizations and groups of discriminating people take pains to spread the word around in advance that such and such pictures soon to be shown are clean and wholesome and helpful.

Churches could do more to help on the production of the best pictures, by permitting notices of such films to be posted on their bulletin boards, and otherwise commending them. Women's clubs have done much recently to spread such information. The pictures are precisely what the people demand. If they want good films, they will get them. And a picture can be fine and thrilling, without descending to coarseness or vulgarity.

TOO MANY FIRES

Fire losses in this country last year were greater than those of 1929 by more than $40,000,000. Arson and incendiarism reached the highest point in many years. The National Board of Fire Underwriters attributes this partly to drought and economic depression.

Most fires are distinctly preventable. Most people know perfectly the simple precautions which ought to be routine in every household—keeping matches in fireproof containers, keeping them away from children, disposing of cigarette stubs properly, fireproof receptacles for hot ashes from furnaces, fire screens before open fireplaces, and so on.

It should be a matter of public disgrace, not merely a misfortune, to have any sort of damaging fire in home or store or public building.

STIMSON VISITS

Already Europe is affluter over the prospect of entertaining Secretary Stimson this summer. The hard-working custodian of our foreign relations has let it be known that he wants to run over for a couple of months of "rest and relaxation." Our European friends are reported to intend that he shall get neither relaxation nor rest.

Obviously Secretary Stimson is going to Europe to escape a Washington summer, and perhaps to pick up incidentally some idea of how Europe regards the convening of the next disarmament in February, as now scheduled. Actually he will find himself forced to listen to all of Europe's woes—and they are many. The disarmament conference is only one of several in which this country is interested. There are also war debts and reparations and the tariff; and overshadowing all is the economic depression, which Europe ascribes, as it does most of its tribulations, to the United States.

As Secretary of state, Stimson will have to listen politely to all this grief—or be set down as another aloof and heartless American. Statesmen will pull him one way. The industrialists will yank him another. The press will bombard him from a third standpoint. While there need be no fear about his coming back with his head squarely on his shoulders, we have a feeling that for a man in his position seeking rest and relaxation this summer Europe presents the least promise of it in six continents.

An earthquake rocked England recently and sent Londoners scurrying into the streets. Almost as exciting as a former German invasion.

Almost half of Spain's cabinet are newspaper men. At least they know something about deadlines.

Apparently Nevada aspires to be the country's "segregated district."

A faithful reproduction of Mount Vernon is being exhibited in Paris, but the chances are that the Parisians would be more interested in a faithful reproduction of the mint.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has refused a plan for a general inquiry into the needs of the railroads. The needs of the railroads like those of the rest of us may be easily resolved into that for more money.

These are hard times on kings. Still, you don't hear much talk about getting rid of the king of Italy.

Other Editorial Thoughts

PUTS ONE OVER

In the days of swashbuckling finance, Theodore Vanderbilt decided to try a freight-rate war. First he wished to embarrass Jay Gould's Erie, and incidentally to strengthen his own road, the New York Central.

At this time, the rate for shipping cattle from Buffalo to New York was one hundred and twenty-five dollars a car load lot. Vanderbilt reduced his rate to one hundred. Gould, countered with a charge of seventy-five. Central went to fifty; Erie to twenty-five; Central finally to a dollar a carload!

Gould couldn't get much lower than a dollar, and to all appearances gave up the battle. The rate on the Erie went back to normal, and the Commodore was exceedingly well pleased with himself. He had given Jay Gould a good tanning at last.

Not a head of cattle was being shipped over the Erie, while Central was carrying to capacity.

Vanderbilt's elation was short-lived, however, for he learned that Gould had bought up every steer west of Buffalo, and had been shipping them over Vanderbilt's line back and forth at a dollar a carload lot! — Exchange.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK.—The big problem today is not how to live within an income but how to live without one.

GIGGLE PROTECTION

It's all right. Cheer up. Follow the advice of Uncle Sam's paid publicity man. Advertise an optimistic attitude.

As Axel Munthe says, author of "The Secret of Life": "Even the devil himself can't hurt a man who has not forgotten how to laugh."

It may sound like bunk, but there's a lot in it.

A LITTLE NONSENSE

You hear a heap these days about getting back to first principles. It's a good idea. Let's go "back" as far back as the nursery, and there dig out as near a bit of the psychology of happiness and good cheer as ever was written. The lesson is to be found in the volume captioned "Mother Goose," and deals with a chap named Johnny Grace, who had a pain in his face, "so bad," says the story, "that he could not spell a letter."

What happened? "Along came Tommy Long, singing such a funny song, that Johnny laughed and found his face much better."

TRUTH IS MIGHTY

"I don't care if you know it," says Marjorie Rambeau, good actress, "I'm thirty-seven."

Which recalls a story they tell of Maurice Francis Egan, educator, novelist, publicist, diplomat. "You are, indeed, a true Irishman," said a friend. "You never spoil a story for want of a few facts."

"Facts," laughed Egan, "are a nuisance when a man wants to get at the truth of things."

RECOMMENDATION

If you want to read something worth while, get a copy of "Noguchi" (Harpers) and learn the story of an artist whose art was science.

Hideo Noguchi, peasant's son from an obscure Japanese province, stood before the world at the age of thirty-seven, honored by kings and nations.

Each of his scientific achievements would do honor to as many men, and the far-reaching results from his discoveries are bringing infinite good to untold millions of mankind.

Noguchi's pure culturing the germ of syphilis, his discovery of the causes of paresis and locomotor ataxia, his identification of Oroya fever with another obscure and hitherto unrelated disease, his work on trachoma and Rocky Mountain spotted fever, and finally his heroic death, in Africa caused by the dread yellow fever he was investigating are recounted in Dr. Gustav Eckstein's masterful biography of the little Japanese genius.

It's as gripping as any novel you ever read.

TRAGEDY

New York houses a number of Children Nobody Wants — hundreds of them, all in quest of foster parents. They sit wistfully in the child shelters provided by the city's adoption organizations where men and women may go and look at them.

Nobody calls for them. Foster parents seek blue-eyed, fair-haired baby girls, preferably a year old or less; and the Children Nobody Wants are for the most part over three years old. They are victims of broken homes—hard times.

The boys and girls of twelve, thirteen, fourteen and fifteen don't even look up when prospective parents enter. They know they're hopeless cases. They're too big. They aren't "cute."

THE PICNIC SEASON IS ON

POLITICIANS MENTION RETURN OF COOLIDGE, THOUGH IN WHISPERS

WASHINGTON.—Although it is hard to think how Calvin Coolidge could be worked into the 1932 Republican presidential picture, the fact remains that he is mentioned by G. O. P. politicians in connection with it quite frequently.

They do it only whisperingly, of course; one would hardly expect a Republican "regular" to express himself openly to any other effect than favorably toward President Hoover's renomination. Insurgents are ready enough to proclaim their opposition to him, but Mr. Coolidge would suit them no better.

In fact, the Coolidge-ites are so cautious that one might almost doubt having heard them aright. It were not that dispatches from French Lick referred to covert hints in the Northamptonian's direction by several G. O. P. governors, during the convention of state executives at the Indiana spa. A muttering which was audible also in French Lick cannot be altogether imaginary here in Washington.

That there are influential individuals among the Republican leaders who would like a presidential candidate other than Mr. Hoover next year is not a circumstance to be surprised at.

It was very well known that the Californian was nominated much against many of the old guard's wishes at Kansas City. They did not consider him a politician—not their kind, anyway. It is true they felt the same way about Mr. Coolidge in 1924, but they got over it in his case; they have not done so in Mr. Hoover's. Perhaps they would, had his administration been as lucky as Mr. Coolidge's. It goes without saying that it has been the reverse, however.

Viewing prospects from the standpoint of today, probably few persons will dispute that Mr. Coolidge ought to be able to make a stronger run for the White House in 1932, with his record of five and a half years of uninterrupted prosperity there, than can reasonably be prophesied for Mr. Hoover, even if business improves considerably between now and next election day. That is—the odds surely would powerfully favor Mr. Coolidge, provided he could get the nomination without any ill feeling.

Politicians quite generally assume that Mr. Coolidge chose not to run in 1928 because he foresaw a slump in the course of the ensuing quadrennium and cared to take no risk of having it occur while he was in office.

This theory sounds very plausible. It does not seem so likely, as some folk argue, that the New Englander was calculating even then on being drafted in 1932, for Mr. Coolidge is fully keen enough to have realized in advance that exactly the situation would prevail which actually does appear certain to prevail—if the G. O. P. nominee's chances look tolerably good, Mr. Hoover himself will want a renomination; if they look so unsatisfactory that Mr. Hoover is willing to step aside, they will not look good enough to suit Mr. Coolidge.

Besides, Mr. Hoover obviously has no disposition to waive the precedent which entitles him to seek the voters' endorsement for a second term in the executive mansion. The administration's plans all are being shaped to that end. If anything, from all indications, the very fact that the luck has been largely against him thus far simply stiffens the Californian's determination to make every effort for a vindication of his policies.

How difficult it is for a White House first term to be eulogized out of a renomination, if he demands it, was demonstrated by the failure of as formidable a rival as T. R. to beat President Taft in the 1912 G. O. P. convention, as badly as the latter's prestige was demoralized.

Even though it were possible, Mr. Coolidge's own boosters admit it would tear the party wide open, which is just what the Northamptonian never would do, as they also agree.

Nevertheless, the idea of conscripting him continues to be discussed sotto voce. It would be poor betting that it will eventuate.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT
Beef Steak Broiled
Baked New Potatoes
Green Peas Radishes Lettuce
Strawberry Delicious
Coffee or Tea

This is a dinner menu which will be welcomed by the family. The strawberry delicious will serve eight.

Today's Recipes

Strawberry Delicious.—One-half pint fresh strawberries, one and one-fourth cups sugar, one-half cup quick cooking tapioca, one-half teaspoon salt, stirred into three cups boiling water, two cloves. Wash, hull and chop fine the strawberries, add one cup sugar and let stand two hours. Place tapioca in double boiler. Pour over it the boiling salted water, add the one-fourth cup sugar and cloves and let cook fifteen or twenty minutes. Remove cloves. Pour into eight glass dessert dishes and let cool, then add to each dish two tablespoons cream and lastly two tablespoons strawberries.

Suggestions

Tea Syrup
For those who like their iced tea sweetened, try making a syrup of one cup sugar to one-half cup water (boil all until dissolved), then serve this with iced tea instead of sugar. It blends with the tea much more readily and is more economical.

Renewing Linoleum

Paint the worn linoleum with a silver-gray flat paint. When dry, sponge stipple with a delft blue paint. A little black may be added to the blue. A clear varnish over with this clear varnish and your linoleum is just as good as new. Gray and green with a little black also makes a very pretty combination.

A DISTINGUISHED SCIENTIST SITTING IN THE AUDIENCE

By Arthur DeV. Carpenter

Some years ago the writer delivering a lecture before high school students in Ft. Wayne, Ind., made use of the old theory of the earth's shrinking interior that left the crust too large, so it buckled up, making mountain ranges. A gentleman in the audience conversed with him at the conclusion, "advancing the 'Continental Drift' theory, and how, by drift to westward of the Americas the Rockies and the Andes were pushed up. This theory is based on the scientific assumption that 1,000 miles under us there is a dense sticky liquid or molten glass on which the continents rest. Professor F. B. Taylor, famous geologist and inventor of the theory, was the man addressing the writer."

Eggs, Milk Valuable In Diet

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Eggs and milk are valuable ingredients of the normal diet for the obvious reason that they are designed by nature to initiate growth and stimulate vitality in a young and greedy organism. The nutrient content of an egg must be such as to start all life processes of the cell at the highest rate of speed. It is not certainly known exactly what all these substances are. They have not been identified nor isolated chemically. They may be similar to or identical with the vitamins or they may be entirely different.

Some insight into the existence of these substances is found in the studies of Rose and McCollum. The title of their report is itself significant—"The effect of adding an egg to a diet already adequate." The diet being received was then sufficient to supply the energy and growth and vitamin and mineral needs of the body before the egg was added. The addition of the egg was found to result in improvement much the same as the liberal use of milk provides. The "adequate diet" eaten before the addition of the egg was sufficient to promote growth in young animals, but the egg was not only more economically utilized for growth as shown by gains in weight per thousand calories, but also resulted in greater growth of the young.

The first experiments done on this subject were on animals. The amount of eggs added to the experimental animal's diet was the equivalent of about an egg a day for a child. It is concluded that eggs and milk are once more demonstrated to be important staple foods for the production of a vigorous race.

Observing children, it was found that the addition of an egg a day to a diet already adequate resulted in improvement in the general health and especially in the hemoglobin content of the blood.

Eggs weigh from 50 to 70 grams on the average. There are larger eggs than 70-gram eggs, but a 70-gram egg is a big egg, and a 50-gram egg is a little egg. A 70-gram egg contains 7 grams of protein and 7 grams of fat, which is, roughly, 90 calories. Eggs contain the minerals, iron, phosphorus, sulphur and calcium, and Vitamins A, E, F and G. On the whole, a very nutritious and useful combination in small space.

Shoe Dye Poisoning
When brown shoes are dyed black, the dye, or some part of it, is often absorbed through the skin of the feet, causing a dark blue color to appear on the skin of the whole body. If the shoes are allowed to dry several days this is almost always prevented.

The condition has been fairly frequently reported. The chemical at fault is either aniline or nitrobenzene. Sometimes it is 20 per cent orthotoluidine. A case has been reported in the baby eight months old. Her mother thought the white canvas uppers of her shoes were too soiled to clean well, so she dyed them. The shoes were put on the baby's feet within an hour after the dye was put on, and it had not entirely dried. An hour after the shoes were put on the baby fell over in a faint. Her skin turned dark blue, and she seemed in a very critical condition. Most of these patients, however, seem sicker than they are. The baby recovered and seemed quite normal and natural in 24 hours.

Folks Must Battle Own Troubles

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"My Dear Miss Lee: I am confronted by a problem and any light you might throw on it I would certainly appreciate. It is not about me but about a very dear pal of mine."

"We have gone together since we were very small boys and know each other very well. We are inseparable. He always brings his problems to me and I do the same with him."

"He is well educated, good looking and well liked by all of his friends. He has already made a name for himself in writing. Some months ago he met a very nice girl, and it became 'love at first sight' with him. The girl was very nice to him, and I thought that they were going to become 'steady.' However, there was some kind of a misunderstanding and she dropped him. I think that she was in the wrong in the way she treated him. 'Ever since that event I haven't been able to do anything with him. He won't go out, he refuses to go with anyone, or do anything. Even sometimes he hardly seems to notice me. I have done everything that I could think of, and it does not seem to do any good. He has written to her several times, but none of his letters were answered. 'L. J. R.'"

You can't do much, my dear boy, but leave your friend to battle with his own disappointment. Folk have to work these things out themselves; no one can help them—at least not much. You can only stand by and let him see by his words and actions that you are a true friend on whom he can rely, and wait for time to lighten his sorrow or for the lady to relent.

Unhappy: It is possible the young man has been prejudiced against you, but also probable that he has just lost interest in the particular matter that interested him. It is unfortunate that you like him so well, but I can't see what you can do about the matter.

Of course if you were very close friends it would not be amiss to ask him outright what has changed him, saying that you have missed his friendship.

Blondie: If you and the boy friend quarrel whenever you meet, it would probably be best that you keep apart for some time. Maybe you will be able to enjoy one another's society more when you meet again.

If you think you can agree after this separation, however, why not call him up, say you're sorry for your part of the quarrel and request him to call again? As to settling the idea of joining the navy out of his head, don't oppose him, but tell him you'll miss him when he's away. He's probably saying that just to tease you, anyway.

Charles: Here are the answers to your questions as well as I can answer:

1. A marriage license is procured at the marriage license bureau at city or county courthouse.
2. In some states a marriage may be performed the same day as the license is procured. There is no waiting period in your state.
3. A marriage license costs two or three dollars, according to the law of the state in which it is procured.
4. No payment is necessary to keep a marriage license from being published. A request is all that is necessary, but not always granted.
5. The minister who performs the ceremony has no fixed charge. He is usually paid five or ten dollars, more or less, according to the means of the bridegroom.
6. Yes.
7. No.
8. If you do not look your age you have better have your birth certificate with you.
9. You must be 21 and the girl 18 to be legally married in your state.
10. Yes, and the minister or justice to perform the ceremony.
11. The ceremony lasts from five minutes to an hour, according to the service that is used. A justice of the peace would probably marry a couple in a few minutes.
12. No.

MARY ANN: If you were unjust to the boy friend and said things you shouldn't, the only thing to do is to apologize. And the only way to learn to control that unruly little tongue, my dear, is to learn to think before you speak, which is much, much more difficult than it seems. And if your first you don't succeed, try, try, try again. As to his not taking you to shows, it may be that he hasn't the money, and it may be that he isn't interested in shows.

Girl Mourns Depilatory's Odor

By GLADYS GLAD

Dotty's lament is one that is made very frequently by women. And unfortunately, there is not, to my knowledge, any such thing as an absolutely odorless depilatory. Such preparations inevitably have an unpleasant scent because of the nature of their constituents. It's unavoidable. And although it is now possible to procure perfumed depilatories, even in these the disagreeable odor cannot wholly be disguised.

However, the skin will not retain any of the unpleasant odor if the depilatory is properly removed. The removal of a depilatory is always rather a messy task. But no matter how unpleasant you find it, don't rush through the procedure and risk doing it unsatisfactorily. A soft cloth, and clear, tepid water should be used to remove the preparation. The water should be laved over the treated areas until the hardened mixture is completely removed.

The rinsing of the depilatory from the legs and arm-pits must be very thorough. One water is never sufficient. Every bit of the preparation must be removed from the skin. If any remains, the unpleasant odor will cling to the body. And moreover, the sulphur and slaked lime that most depilatories contain, if permitted to remain on the skin, may cause an irritation that may lead to extreme soreness.

Make the rinsing process as speedy as possible—but also as thorough as possible. You must be sure to use at least three clear waters for the rinsing, if you wish to be entirely free from the odor of the depilatory, and also if you wish to avoid any soreness of the skin of the treated areas. And it is also advisable always to apply a soothing lotion or greaseless cream after the use of a depilatory on the skin.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

There is said to be a growing feeling in British sporting circles that "Painting" Phil Scott, described as the "luckless swooning swan of England," should retire at once and give up (besides himself) his title of British heavyweight boxing champion.

This general belief on the other side gained added weight following Scott's humiliating defeat at the hands of Young Stribling, the Atlanta, Ga., heavyweight, in London recently.

There is talk of matching him for another "fight," despite the fact Scott, who still remains heavyweight champion of his own country, was made to look like a novice by Stribling.

That Scott can only perpetuate a situation humiliating to himself and British boxing if he continues to hold the "championship," is the opinion almost unanimously expressed by British newspapers and the public.

The London Daily Express sums up the situation this way: "The only blows which Scott delivered in his fight with Stribling were knockout blows at British boxing prestige. He certainly entered the ring unfit and he gave every appearance of having no heart for a fight."

Says the London Daily Mail: "Philip Stribling, to give him his real name, passes out, and we must begin all over again to find a heavyweight champion of English birth."

Judging from their comments in the public print, heavyweight wrestlers in this country are slowly approaching a point where, if they are not careful, they will get so mad they will want to wrestle each other. So far they have evaded the issue nicely.

Having determined that certain species of fish are in danger of depletion and require added protection in the inland fishing district, the Ohio Conservation Council has ordered that for a five-year period, commencing June 16, the bag limits per day for various species shall be as follows:

White bass, twenty; yellow perch, twenty; combined species, twenty; sunfish, including the longear, punkinseed and green sunfish (combined species), twenty; and further providing that these species, along with black bass, rock bass, bluegill and crappies, shall be not more than forty, and not more than two days' legal catch will be allowed in possession at any one time. Laugh this off Mart Schmidt and the rest of you fishermen.

GRAHAM PAINTS AND DOWNTOWNERS PLAY TIE OVERTIME TILT

Luck Helps Second Placers; Triple Play Is Argued

All reports are not yet in, but a post-game canvass of the opinions of the cigar store "experts" revealed one thing to be certain—that it is the consensus of all the Graham Paints and Downtown Country Club softball teams struggled eleven innings to a 5 to 5 tie, the National League skirmish being finally called on account of darkness at Cox Battledfield Wednesday eve.

The "experts" freely expressed the opinion the Paints deserved to win, only to have the so-called "breaks" of the ball game go against them, particularly in the first half of the eleventh round when the Downtowners retired the side by executing what will go down in the records as a triple play.

It must be admitted the Downtowners were doubtless fortunate to escape with a tie. It may have been they were generously equipped with rabbits' feet, four-leaf clovers, horse shoes and other tokens of good luck.

For the first six innings the second-placers were completely docile. They were helpless at bat and the Paints were leading by a score of 5 to 0.

Lloyd Downey, Graham's hurler, was pitching a magnificent game and had not allowed the semblance of a hit for five innings and two-thirds of the sixth, but three errors a walk and a single enabled the Downtowners to score three times in the seventh, and in the eighth they leveled the count when four hits produced two runs.

The ninth and tenth innings were scoreless, and in the eleventh the Paints staged an uprising which terminated in a fluke triple play, about which the boys are still arguing. With runners on first and second by virtue of singles, Milburn hit a low liner to left. Whether LeSourd "trapped" the ball or caught it was the burning question involved in the general argument which followed, but the umpires ruled the ball had been caught. One runner was stranded at the plate while the debate grew in volume. Finlay made all four of the bases, touching each bag to double up all and sundry runners. It was perhaps just as well the Downtowners failed to score in their half of the eleventh and the game was called on account of darkness.

The Paints opened the game with a vicious attack which produced four runs in the first inning. L. Cope was safe one an error, W. Cope singled, Haverstick did like-wise and Milburn propelled a tremendous home run to deep left field. The Paints added another in the third on two errors without making a hit.

Downey twirled a marvelous game for the Paints and had his strike-out ball working to perfection, as "Skip" will testify. He established a record by fanning no less than fifteen batters, whiffing every player on the Downtown team except Marshall, a newcomer on the team, at least once.

Altogether he allowed only six hits while his mates assaulted Frame, opposing hurler, for twelve bingles. Willie Cope obtained three hits for Graham's to lead the attack, Frame accidentally getting two for the Downtowners.

Central High will play the All-Stars Thursday night. Lineups:

TONY LAZZERI NOT TRADED BUT WILL BE RETURNED TO LINE-UP

NEW YORK, June 11.—Far from trading Tony Lazzeri to Washington or any other club, Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees is going to give the San Francisco Italian another chance to make good at second base, his old position.

The walloping wop from Telegraph Hill, who has been the victim of the most mystifying batting slump of the 1931 campaign, may return to the midway post during the current series with the Chicago White Sox here. He has been working out at second in morning practice recently. Used at third base most of the season, Tony has batted only .234 to date.

"Lazzeri will be back in the game soon," said McCarthy this morning in denying a report that the one-time premier second sacker of the league would be traded to Washington for pitcher Bump Hadley and Jack Hayes, utility infielder. "His leg went bad some time ago and I had to take him out a couple of times. His leg is all right now and his arm is as strong as it was three years ago."

The idea of a trade involving Lazzeri aroused little enthusiasm among New York fans today. For five years a brilliant fielder and a dangerous hitter with runners on the bases, "Poosh 'em up" Tony has become a fixture at the local ball orchard. He batted under .300 only once.

This year "poosh 'em up" has been pushing the ball into the air via the pop fly route instead of pushing it over the fences. What to do with Tony has been one of McCarthy's most aggravating problems.

A lot of water has passed under the bridge since that day last fall when Marse Joe, who had never seen his new club in action, made the flat declaration that Tony would play third and Ben Chapman second. Since then Chapman has been converted into a left fielder, Joe Sewell has been secured to play third and Jimmy Reese has been holding down the second base job.

If Lazzeri returns to the game, Reese will be the man to be benched, for McCarthy said today that Chapman will stay in left field and that Sewell will remain at third base. Reese has not been hitting well.

McCarthy, like Roger Peckinpaugh of Cleveland, has not given up hope of catching the league-leading Athletics.

"Mack's ten-game lead could be wiped out in ten days," says Joe optimistically. "Remember the year when the Yanks blew a thirteen-game lead? And look at Cleveland's twelve-game losing streak a while back. The same thing might happen to the A's."

"I believe our pitching will improve shortly. The hurlers were thrown out of their stride by the long string of postponements on our western trip. Gomez and Ruffing are pitching fine ball. Pipgras will be all right as soon as he gets one good game under his belt. There is no reason why Sherid shouldn't be a winner."

"The fact is that all the pitchers in the league, except the Philadelphia and Washington staffs, have been in-and-out performers. I have a hunch the Yanks are due to get a lot of good pitching."

ANTIOCH IS VICTOR OVER WILBERFORCE

Maintaining its undefeated status in intercollegiate tennis competition this season, Antioch College's net team triumphed over Wilberforce University's previously unbeaten racket wielders by a margin of 4 to 3 in a match on the Wilberforce clay courts Wednesday afternoon.

Wilberforce swept both doubles matches, but Antioch was superior in the singles engagements, winning four of the five matches.

In the most brilliant singles match of the afternoon, Maceo Hill, captain of the Wilberforce net squad, vanquished Hoer, star of the Antioch team, in a blitter three-set duel. After dropping the first set at 2-6, Hill rallied and won the next two by scores of 6-4, 6-1.

Hill was formerly national colored intercollegiate singles champion and national junior singles champion, and at present is the national indoor singles titleholder.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, June 11.—Under the lead of the amusement stocks and specialties, the market moved into a slightly higher range of prices in the early trading today.

Fox Film responded briskly to the overnight report of the election of a powerful and influential board of directors composed of leading bankers and industrialists in New York and other financial centers. The dividend "news" was good, the stock having been put on a $2.50 annual basis, with the prospect held out of the return to a $4 basis by the end of the year.

Selling at 20½, Fox Film showed a new gain of 3 points and a 7-point recovery from the low of last week. Loews, Paramount and other theatrical stocks rose a point or less, and further improvement was recorded in amusement bonds.

HUSBAND AND WIFE GET DEGREES

WHEN the names of Wanda Lewis and Malcolm Lewis were read as degrees were conferred at Wilberforce University Thursday afternoon, few persons present realized the significance of the similarity of their last names.

For Wanda Lewis is Mrs. Malcolm Lewis, wife of the "Mal" Lewis whose exploits on the gridiron as a member of the Bulldog eleven are now history. Lewis received a degree of B. S. in Agriculture and Mrs. Lewis received a degree of B. S. in Education. This is the first time in several years that husband and wife have received degrees in the same graduating class at Wilberforce.

Miss Gladys Jones, daughter of President Gilbert H. Jones, was also a member of the class.

FOUND GUILTY FOR RESISTING OFFICERS

Charged with having interfered with an officer in the performance of his duties, Harry Soddors, Jamestown, was adjudged guilty by Probate Judge S. C. Wright following a hearing Wednesday. The court deferred passage of sentence for three days to permit the filing of a motion for a new trial.

Soddors is a brother of Arthur Soddors, Stringtown Road, who was fined $100 and costs by Judge Wright Wednesday for possessing liquor. Vella, wife of Arthur Soddors, was also assessed $30 and costs for resisting an officer during a liquor raid at the Soddors residence five miles from Xenia last Saturday night.

The charge placed against Harry Soddors resulted when he allegedly tried to prevent Sheriff John Baughn from lodging Mr. and Mrs. Soddors in jail last Monday.

IDENTIFY VICTIM AS FAIRFIELD MAN

A man fatally injured when struck by an auto at Troy and Leo Sts. in Dayton Monday night, was identified by Dayton police Thursday as Charles Clark, 53, a blacksmith at Fairfield.

Identification was made through records in the bureau of identification at Dayton police headquarters, a record having been made of Clark's finger prints when he was arrested in 1927 on a minor charge. Clark was struck by an auto of Harold Moore, 19, of 1119 Clay St., Troy, after he stepped from between parked machines into the path of the car.

Police were unable to identify the victim from papers found in his clothing and the body lay at an undertaking establishment two days. The crash victim is survived by five sons.

Chaplin's "Find"

It would appear that Charlie Chaplin's European trip, taken for a much-needed vacation, is turning into a voyage of discovery, for hard upon the heels of his "find" of Patricia Detering, who, he says, has everything, comes another discovery. This time the melancholic pantomimist is wonder-stricken by the beauty, charms and artistic ability of Florelle Constantine (above), a Roumanian brunette. Chaplin has recommended her to a well-known film company for a

ALLEGED BIGAMIST PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Accused of bigamy, John H. Wheeler, 34, colored, 1037 E. Second St., is being held by police pending an investigation of a charge that he re-married recently without being legally divorced from his first wife.

Arraigned before Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Thursday morning, Wheeler pleaded not guilty, asserting he married again when he learned his first wife had obtained a divorce.

Wife number one, living in Philadelphia, Pa., brought about his arrest and the man's hearing has been deferred until her arrival in Xenia. She is expected here Saturday.

Poems that Live

"AWAKE! AWAKE!"
AWAKE! awake! the stars are pale, the east is russet gray;

They fade, behold the phantoms fade, that keep the gates of Day;

Throw wide the burning valves, and let the golden streets be free,

The morning watch is past—the watch of evening shall not be.

Put off, put off your mail, ye kings; and beat your brands to dust;

A surer grasp your hands must know, your hearts a better trust;

Nay, bend aback the lance's point, and break the helmet bar—

A noise is on the morning winds; but not the noise of war!

For aye, the time of wrath is past, and near the time of rest,

And honor binds the brow of man, and faithfulness his breast,

Behold, the time of wrath is past, and righteousness shall be,

And the Wolf is dead in Arcady and the Dragon in the sea!

Theatrical World Mourns Its Grand Old Man

David Belasco Has Made His Last Exit, But the Fruits of His Genius Will Keep His Memory Fresh in the Hearts of Theatre Lovers.

As a poet is remembered for his poems, an artist for his pictures and a novelist for his books, so will David Belasco, whose death has plunged the theatre into mourning, be remembered for the stars he made and the magnificent work he did in nearly half a century of association with the theatre. Among the brilliant actresses whom he discovered and developed were Mrs. Leslie Carter, Jane Cowl, Leonore Ulric and his most recent find, Helen Gahagan. Belasco had the genius for recognizing genius in others, and that same genius that he discovered and developed will be his memorial for all time in the theatrical world.

By ALICE ALDEN
The lamp of the "maker of stars" has been extinguished. The lights are out and the curtain has rolled softly down. But the stars shine on in the dazzling firmament of the theatre, stars, discovered by the greatest of all theatrical astronomers, David Belasco.

Of all the countless people, theatergoers, associates and friends, who mourn the great showman, none are more sincere in their grief than that procession of artists, discovered by Belasco, tutored and made famous by him. The list is a long one, ranging from the scintillating Mrs. Leslie Carter to the brilliant Helen Gahagan, now starring in the last Belasco production, "Tonight, or Never." It includes the dynamic Leonore Ulric, Judith Anderson, Frances Starr and David Warfield.

It was almost fifty years ago that Belasco began to teach acting in his spare time. The amazing performances at the old Lyceum Theater soon became the talk of the profession and actors and actresses and gifted amateurs besieged the director to be permitted to warm themselves at the thespian fires that he had lighted. The greatest of all his pupils was undoubtedly Mrs. Leslie Carter who had twice applied to Belasco for tutelage. Mrs. Carter sold jewels and other possessions to maintain herself while studying with Mr. Belasco, but her performance in 1890 in "The Ugly Duckling" established her as a great artist and amply repaid her sacrifice and her teacher a better in her. Her great triumph was in "Zaza" which she played both here and in England. When Mrs. Carter remarried in 1906 she quarrelled with Belasco, an estrangement that continued until only last month. Mrs. Carter declared recently that Belasco had blamed himself for the quarrel.

Next Belasco discovered and developed David Warfield and another one of his finds was Mary Pickford who scored a signal success in "The Poor Little Rich Girl." Frances Starr was playing a small role in a Belasco production when the producer noticed her expressive hands. He trained her and she, became one of the great actresses of the day. Belasco spotted Leo Ditrichstein in the Old German Theater in New York and coached him to stardom and made him one of the most distinguished actors on the English speaking stage. Another actress who mounted the ladder to stardom with the help of Belasco is Ina Claire, now a movie star.

In recent years, many of the greatest Belasco triumphs centered about the tempestuous personality of Leonore Ulric. Her first great Belasco success was in "Tiger Rose." Other signal triumphs were scored in "Kiki," "The Harem" and as the Harlem belle in "Lulu Belle." Her last appearance with the Belasco interests was in "Mama" a strange affair that seemed to have more to do with dynamos than drama.

Belasco's latest and last production, "Tonight or Never," included in its cast another Belasco find, Helen Gahagan. As the lovely prima donna in that charming play, she was a living example of Belasco training and coaching. Miss Gahagan, deeply grateful and attached to her distinguished mentor and friend, collapsed when she learned of his death. Members of the cast are happy that although "D. B." did not witness the premiere of the play he saw it after his recovery from the attack of pneumonia that laid him low during the winter.

And so, the great showman has taken his last encore and passed through the final stage door. It has been said that the art of the actor is the most fleeting because it leaves no actual work or memento behind it. But Belasco the producer the showman, the playwright, the maker of stars, will live on as a tradition, as a goal for all lovers of the American theater. Genius can never wholly die.

EXAMINATION FOR POLICE VACANCIES

Three vacancies on the Xenia police department will be filled through a civil service examination to be conducted by the Civil Service Commission at City Hall at 7:30 o'clock Thursday night.

Prospective applicants, expected to number between twenty and forty, will be required to produce health certificates signed by a physician, while ex-service men who take the examination must produce their discharge papers.

The examination was called to enable City Manager M. S. Smith to make permanent appointments of two regular patrolmen and a day desk sergeant on the police force.

INJURY AIDS AUTO THIEF

DEL NORTE, Colo. June 11—Wilbur Crowley, arrested here in an automobile stolen at Monte Vista, Colo., told police he had fractured his arm last November in an auto accident in Florida. Peniless, Crowley was unable to obtain aid. "I'll plead guilty, or do anything to get where somebody will fix my arm." Local authorities, instead of prosecuting, arranged for Crowley to receive medical aid.

NOT TO PROSECUTE OSCAR GOINGS FOR POSING AS OFFICER

Although Oscar Goings, 51, colored, Xenia, posing as a "wealthy United States marshal," wrote impassioned love letters to eighteen white women in Ohio, Kentucky, and Indiana, he was not prosecuted on a charge of impersonating an officer, according to information received by police Tuesday from Paul H. Creswell, Xenia, United States marshal for the Southern Ohio district.

Arrested in Xenia recently on the complaint of a New Castle, Ind., woman, whose suspicions were aroused when Goings evaded a meeting and after a soothsayer had warned her "all was not well" with her romance, the Negro was held for investigation.

The inquiry developed, however, that the amorous letter writer had received no money from any of the women with whom he corresponded and had never worn a badge nor appeared in public in the guise of an officer, so the department of justice ordered him released.

Authorities confiscated a large bundle of love letters Goings had received from women, including a Cincinnati widow with two children, whom he was making arrangements to marry June 15, it is said.

In his letters the colored man had described himself as a lonely U. S. marshal, living in a palatial home on the drive to the O. S. and S. O. Home in Xenia, and seeking the companionship of some refined woman. Actually, his only home was a cot in a slaughter house near the city limits where he acted as caretaker and performed occasional jobs as a laborer.

Woman Trapped in "Dream House"

One of the largest dope rings on the Pacific Coast, with branches in New York, was unearthed in a 16-room "dream house" in Oakland, Calif., (shown above). Edna Lewis, 34, (insert) asserted to be connected with the ring which operated the mansion as a "dope cure sanitarium," was trapped in San Francisco by California narcotic agents. The roomy house, with spacious grounds, was known among addicts as a "dream house" where they could go and "live like millionaires for a couple of weeks." The ring is being probed further.

OLDEST GRADUATES OF WILBERFORCE U. HONORED THURSDAY

A feature of the Diamond Jubilee and commencement celebration at Wilberforce University this week was the honoring by the university of its two oldest living graduates.

The graduates thus honored, were Miss Hallie Q. Brown, nationally famous club woman and lecturer, and Mrs. B. F. Lee, now of one of the university's presidents. Both were presented with huge bouquets of flowers in token of the university's esteem. They were members of the graduating class of 1873.

Miss Brown served as toast-mistress for the alumni breakfast, Thursday morning in the dining room of Shorter Hall. Active for her years, and brilliant of mind, she furnished an inspiration for the young graduates.

Mrs. Lee, whose home adjoins the campus, was unable to be present at the breakfast but sent the following message:

"My connection with Wilberforce, dating from childhood days of 1859, has seen her steady forward movement. The class of 1872 looked upon only the promise of what graduates of 1931 have had as realization.

"To have been connected with the early days of what should prove a monument to Negro effort, to have been with Wilberforce in her pioneering days—if one might so express it—leaves one a legacy of gratifying reflection."

"My heart asks for her going forward, and the past argues for such a future. May her Diamond Jubilee carry to all who have loved and known her a radiant significance."

Will Double Murder Expose Crime-Politics Alliance?

Sensational Disclosures Looked for in Investigation Into the Murder of Crawford and Spencer, Anti-Vice Crusaders.

THE MAN WHO DEFIED THE UNDERWORLD DAVID H. CLARK

ELECT HIM

Municipal Court Judge

Office No. 7

TUESDAY, MAY 5

Taking up the cudgels on behalf of the law-abiding element of Los Angeles and Hollywood, Charles Crawford, millionaire politician, and Herbert F. Spencer, veteran newspaperman, waged a ceaseless war upon the forces of vice and corruption until their tongues were still by assassin bullets. Many believe that their deaths will complete the promises to lift the lid off organized crime and its relation to politics in Los Angeles. Though their murders were not a great surprise, considering the enemies they had made in the underworld, the arrest of David H. Clark, which followed, was a distinct shock. Clark, a former deputy prosecutor in the District Attorney's Office, has won an enviable reputation as a brilliant and fearless lawyer, and was a candidate for Municipal Judge of Los Angeles. Police are also seeking June Taylor, alleged underworld hanger-on, and one-time confidante of Albert Marco, local vice chief, whom Clark sent to prison.

LOS ANGELES, June 11.—In this enlightened age, the Year of Our Lord 1931, killings are no longer news, that is, unless the killer gets caught. But the double murder of Charles Crawford, prominent politician, and Herbert F. Spencer, veteran newspaperman, both of Los Angeles, promises not only to be news, but sensational news of graft, protection and all the other unsavory, odoriferous things that are offshoots of an alliance between organized crime and politics.

Charles Crawford had been for years a crusader against corrupt practices in politics. Being a millionaire, he could afford the expensive, if somewhat dangerous hobby of chopping off the tentacles that reached up from the underworld and dragged men to whom citizens looked for guidance down into the quagmire of vice and corruption.

In Spencer, Crawford found a willing and able helper. With a background of twenty years as a police reporter, Spencer was said to have more sources of information about the doings of the underworld than any man in Los Angeles. Recently the veteran scribe bought part of the "Critic of Critics," a liberal magazine, and used that organ in his and Crawford's campaign against the gangsters, gamblers and racketeers of Los Angeles and Hollywood. In the issue current at the time of his murder, Spencer threatened to expose the hidden power of the underworld. That he himself had been threatened is obvious from an article that appeared in his publication declaring that if any member of his staff were molested a safe deposit box in a certain bank would reveal the names, haunts and habits of all those who would be interested in closing the editor's mouth.

When one considers the unscrupulous enemies Crawford and Spencer are sure to have made as a result of their anti-vice campaign, the killing is not surprising, but the sensational developments that followed are astonishing in their unexpectedness.

David H. Clark, former assistant to District Attorney Buron Fitts, was arrested and is now charged with the double murder. Clark, who has built up an enviable reputation as a prosecutor, was a candidate for Municipal Judge of Los Angeles, and his candidacy was vigorously opposed by Crawford and Spencer. The police theory is that the double killing is in some way connected with the election but Clark refuses either to admit complicity or to deny it.

The fog that envelops the mystery is still further thickened by the entrance of another character into the drama. Police are seeking June Taylor, alleged underworld hanger-on with a long record on the "blotter," and they hope to form a connection between her and Clark with a possible vista of a pre-election frameup in the background.

The Taylor woman, police say, is a former confidante of Albert Marco, the local vice chief who was sent to San Quentin by Clark when he was Deputy Prosecutor.

It might be of interest to state here that in San Quentin with Marco is a former District Attorney of Los Angeles, Asa Keyes, so it seems that the film capital of the world has its dramas in real life with ever-changing roles — tomorrow.

GARDEN TOOLS
Written for Central Press
By DR. KARL E. KELLERMAN
Bureau of Plant Industry
U. S. Department of Agriculture

The value of the gardener's time in relation to the value of the garden determines the expense he is warranted in going to in providing labor-saving equipment, say horticulturists of the Bureau of Plant Industry.

Seedsman and plantmen usually carry a good assortment of tools and their catalogues offer suggestions.

For hedge trimming, there is an automatic trimmer much like a farm hay mower. It does a neat job and does the work more rapidly than shears.

Wheel hoes speed up the work of cultivating. They come provided with interchangeable hoes, cultivating teeth, plows, and rakes. Some even have a seed drill. They are useful in sowing a quantity of seed. They save time, and also do the work more uniformly.

In spraying and dusting devices for fighting insect pests and plant diseases, the gardener has wide choice. For the small garden, the kind that works like a bicycle pump is probably efficient enough. But for the more pretentious garden the work can be speeded up and done more thoroughly with the compressed air sprayer that delivers a continuous spray. Remember that spray guns of all kinds should be cleaned thoroughly after use.

Lawn sprinklers, pruning shears, trowels, plant stakes, hand cultivators, various kinds of flower pots and cut flower vases are all conveniences. Any device that speeds up and lightens the work gives the gardener more time to enjoy his garden and grounds.

COUNTRY SHOULD BE THANKFUL FOR WISE LEADERS SAYS FESS

pression, he asserted, was born of war and the aftermath of war.

"Industrial depressions or crises are incident to disturbances of economic forces of whatever character, whether unstable governmental policies, over-expansion of industry or war inflation," he continued.

"That of 1817 was mostly due to the year of 1812.

"The crisis of 1837 was due to the over-expansion of western land sales on the one hand and the fight against the ultimate destruction of the United States Bank on the other.

"That of 1857 was most largely due to a free trade policy known as the Walker tariff bill and the over-stimulus of the Crimean War.

"The crisis of 1873 was a direct result of the Civil War over stimulus and inflation of railroad building followed by inevitable reaction.

"That of 1893 was the direct result of an assault upon the American system of protection as finally resulted in the Wilson bill, relief from which came through the Dingley bill two years later.

"That of 1907 was largely due to governmental efforts to curtail the course of big business in industry and the inevitable disturbance of labor and capital in fear of further legislation.

"The crisis of 1921, while affected by the over-expansion of industry through war demands, was most largely due to the Underwood bill, which placed American labor in competition with European labor.

"The war, opening in 1914, operated as complete protection against the importation of foreign goods. When peace was signed this protection was at an end. Whereupon the operation of the competitive tariff was unhindered. By 1921 its baleful effect was at its height.

As usual the remedy demanded by the American public was the restoration of protection, which came in the Fordney-McCumber act, when we entered upon a period of unprecedented prosperity. Never in the history of mankind has business activity reached so high a level. This high level was sustained during the longest period in business history.

"Capital was fully invested; labor was generally employed; wages were at the highest peak; prosperity was not widely distributed; purchasing power was at its maximum.

"These conditions permitted a high standard of living which naturally stimulated extravagance. Speculation became active and rapidly approached the danger point.

"It was too much to hope that the United States, although sound in all her basic industries could be exempt from the effects of a world-wide condition in which an economic chaos settled down upon it like a huge eclipse."

The Mysterious Young Man

By LOUISE GERARD

READ THIS FIRST:

A young man in a yellow roadster comes speeding through the park of Mooring Castle, England. He is of slight build but from his clothes one knows him for an American. His ring brings Symonds, the butler, who is not at all sure his mistress, Lady Mooring, will see the young man. "Tell her my name is Roy T. Burney, of New York, and she'll see me," is the response. And Lady Mooring cancels an important luncheon engagement, to the butler's surprise. Terror stricken and with despair in her eyes, she meets Burney in the library. As they begin to talk the young man strides to the door and catches the butler in a listening attitude and sends him off. Returning to Lady Mooring he quiets her fears and by the time they have finished the conversation she is calling him her darling. They leave the castle for a secluded place to talk.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 3

A GIRL was hurrying along a deserted street in a London suburb. She did not walk quickly because the hour was late, the night dark and the way lonely. Trifles of this sort did not affect Ann Carmichael. She was hurrying because in the block of flats where she lived the outer doors closed at eleven o'clock, and she had forgotten her key.

On turning a corner leading into a wide road with detached houses on one side and on the other the black, souging expanse of Hampstead Heath, in the light of a lamp she glanced at her wrist-watch. It said a quarter to eleven. As her objective was only five minutes' walk away she slackened her speed.

The light showed a tall, well-made girl in shabby attire, with a well-cut, rather haughty face. She had a bob of wavy brown hair brushed straight back from her forehead, a fresh complexion, and large gray eyes where a harassed look lurked.

The only child of a distinguished savant and explorer, from leaving school until her twenty-second birthday Ann had accompanied her father on his expeditions, helping him with his work.

Three years previously, her name had been very much to the fore. While searching for strange plants in Borneo, the professor had met with a fatal accident. Heart-broken, Ann had buried him under the trees of the tropic forest he had so loved. Single-handed she had accomplished the work he had set out to do, and had brought herself, her father's specimens and a train of native porters safely back to headquarters. A feat the English and American newspapers had called "an epic of courage and fortitude."

Professor Carmichael had had the reputation of being wealthy, but when his affairs were settled his widow and daughter had barely a hundred pounds a year between them.

Carmichael, a woman used to a sheltered, luxurious life, had broken down completely.

"Oh, what shall we do? What shall we do?" she had wailed. Ann, however, at once had gathered up the shreds of their shattered lives.

"Don't you worry, Mumsey darling," she had said to her distracted parent, "we shall manage all right."

Ann had no special qualifications or degrees. Crazy to travel, she had left school at the age of sixteen. Occasionally she had dabbled in journalism. Now she attacked the profession seriously.

Moving from her big house into a tiny flat, she next obtained a position in a newspaper office and did freelance

The Theater

Sylvia Sidney, whose debut in pictures was the result of Clara Bow's indisposition, gets another boost up the ladder by her selection by Samuel Goldwyn to replace Nancy Carroll in "Street Scene," Elmer Rice's screen adaptation of his Pulitzer prize play.

After her substitution for the Bow in "City Streets" opposite Gary Cooper, Miss Sidney played the principal feminine part in "An American Tragedy," Her last stage role was "Bad Girl."

Estelle Taylor has been signed to her second role in Goldwyn pictures. After playing with Ronald Colman in "The Unholy Garden," she gets an important role in "Street Scene." William Collier, Jr., has the principal masculine role in this play.

Further United Artists plans: Mervyn LeRoy, the kid director,

Shirley Mason, once popular film player, now the wife of Sidney Landfield, the scenarist, is expecting a blessed event. . . . Nancy Carroll and her sister Terry, are to play sisters in "Personal Maid" which Paramount is making in New York. Terry is a blonde and a third sister, Elsie, a brunette. . . . Hough is an assistant director at Fox, is happily married, and has been widely kidded as a result of Dorothy's prank. . . . Charley Darlington is an enthusiast for Theater Guild productions. He wants the Guild to do "After Dark" next season.

Cupid Spans 20 Years To Bring Fifi Romance

When the Emancipated Fifty-one-Year-Old Mrs. Stillman Married Fowler McCormick, the Great God Mammon Was Ousted.

Mr. and Mrs. FOWLER MCCORMICK at HONEYMOON COTTAGE

Mr. and Mrs. BUD STILLMAN AS MRS. JAMES A. STILLMAN WITH HUSBAND IN 1928.

When immediately after winning a final decree of divorce from James A. Stillman, New York banker, Mrs. Anne U. Stillman married Fowler McCormick, heir to the harvester millions, society gossips sat up and began to look about for a motive. Why, they ask, should a 51-year-old woman marry a man twenty years her junior? Not for money, because they've both more than they can use, then why? The gossips overlooked the most obvious reason. Love! There has been for years a strong bond of sympathy between McCormick and the woman who is now his wife. A staunch friend of her son "Bud," with whom he was at Princeton and for whom he acted as best man when he started society by marrying Lena Wilson, his mother's servant, Fowler McCormick helped Mrs. Stillman through the ordeal attendant upon the sensational trial in which the paternity of her son was the point at issue. His championship of Mrs. Stillman at that time and his subsequent efforts for her happiness leave no room for doubt as to the motive that was behind the May-December marriage.

EAST HAMPTON, L. I., June 11.—Here is a secluded nook on a Long Island promontory, with the rumbling Atlantic on one side and the whispering waters of the Sound on the other, is being written another canto in the love saga of the dynamic woman who, until a few days ago, was Mrs. Anne U. Stillman, sometimes known as "Fifi."

A bride again at fifty-one, the woman whose love affairs, marital difficulties, estrangements, reconciliations and final divorce have occupied more space in the newspapers than most of the big figures of our time, has started a new life with a new husband, twenty years her junior, confident that this time she has found permanent happiness.

The former Mrs. Stillman's divorce from James A. Stillman, big financial figure of New York, came as a surprise to many of their intimates as the couple seems to have been living in harmony for the past few years since their last reconciliation. But her marriage to Fowler McCormick was expected by most of those who were familiar with the strange bond of sympathy that has always existed between the middle-aged beauty and the scion of the harvester dynasty.

In most May and December romances, Cupid, instead of the traditional William Tell artillery, struts his stuff with a bankroll. In this instance, however, regardless of the disparity in ages, such a motive cannot be considered. McCormick, a son of Harold F. McCormick, the multi-millionaire harvester king and the former Edith Rockefeller, daughter of John D., is heir to something like $10,000,000 and his bride is wealthy enough in her own right to McCormicks started work as a common laborer in his father's harvester machine shop at Milwaukee, it was on Mrs. Stillman's advice. Later, Fowler visited the Stillman camp at Grand Anse, Quebec, as a guest of "Bud" Stillman whom he had befriended at Princeton, and became still more attached to "Bud's" mother. From then on, young McCormick was never far away from the house of Stillman. We find him acting as best man for "Bud" when the Stillman heir married Lena Wilson, a former servant of his mother. He came into the picture again when he was instrumental in effecting a reconciliation between "Fifi" and her banker husband because he thought he was working for the happiness of the woman he had grown to love.

And now we find him braving the glaring spotlight of publicity, the whispering tongues of scandal-mongers and the senseless chatter of gossips taking his stand by the side of the woman he loves and helping her to write a new chapter in her eventful life, a chapter of peace and happiness.

DIARY MAY BE MURDER CLEW

NAMES REVEALED IN BOOK SHOW AFFAIRS INVOLVING BEAUTY

Scotland Yard Aids Probe Of Death Of Heiress

NEW YORK, June 11.—“There were several persons in the life of Starr Faithfull who would have been happier if she were dead.”

This cryptic statement by District Attorney Elvin Edwards today accompanied the intensive examination of the personal diary of the young Greenwich Village beauty, whose murdered body was found on the silent sands of Long Beach, Long Island.

The contents of the leather-bound book with the silver clasps in which the slain girl recorded her innermost thoughts was expected by authorities to solve New York's most vivid murder in a decade.

There are many names in the little book which 25-year-old Starr thought nobody would ever see. Most of those names are of men—for Starr knew many men. How prominent they were is a matter of waiting for twenty-four hours to pass.

“But there were rich men and no beggar men or thieves,” said one detective today.

While the district attorney would not go into details about the contents of the diary, it was learned that the notations were colorful, emotional and marked with the Pseudo-Literary style of a girl who wanted to be a writer.

Youthful Starr was funny that way. She wanted to live and write. She unfortunately learned to live so fast that she never got down to writing—much. Some manuscripts—half finished—have been hidden away by her step-father, Stanley E. Faithfull, and her mother, A. Faithfull, a natural instinct to shield the private thoughts of Starr led her parents to keep the “love diary” secret until detectives discovered it.

LONDON, June 11.—Scotland Yard, Britain's famous organization for the tracking down and prosecution of criminals, took active measures today to aid in solving the mysterious slaying of Miss Starr Faithfull, New York heiress whose body was washed up on a Long Island beach a few days ago.

Preparations were made to question officers of the Cunard liner Franconia, from which the murdered girl was put in the outer harbor of New York shortly after the vessel sailed for England on May 29.

Scotland Yard operatives faced an arduous task. The Franconia was docked immediately after her arrival at Southampton and her personnel released for their annual vacation.

The ship is not scheduled to sail again until July 10. Her officers and men are scattered throughout the British Isles either in their homes or vacation resorts, but Scotland Yard planned to question every one of the liner's officers regarding reports the girl had been seen in an intoxicated and hysterical condition aboard the ship a little while before she was placed aboard a tug in the harbor and sent back to New York.

BLOODHOUNDS USED IN MURDER SEARCH

LOUISA, Ky., June 11.—Bloodhounds were unleashed in the hills of Kentucky near here today as authorities pressed an intensive search for the murderer of John Adkins, 65, reputedly wealthy merchant of Twin Branch.

With his skull fractured and a knife wound in his throat, Adkins' body was found in his bachelor apartment late yesterday by officials who sought him when he failed to appear at circuit court where he was plaintiff in a robbery case.

Probability of a robbery motive was strongly suggested in the mystery surrounding Adkins' death. It was learned that only a few days ago he withdrew $5,000 from a Louisville bank, stating at the time that the money “would be safer in my pocket.”

Scientists Attempt To Explain Ohio Earth Shock; Advance New Theories

Hole In Ground Near Investigations

TOLEDO, O., June 11.—The tiny village of Malinta, O., thirty-five miles southwest of here, was a mecca of scientific investigation today as authorities on meteors and explosive experts sought to determine the cause of the terrific shock that jarred northwestern Ohio early yesterday.

A mammoth hole, ten feet in depth and of considerable length and width, which was discovered near by Malinta, apparently held the solution. Some believe the hole was torn by a huge meteor. Others contend it was ripped by a powerful explosive blast.

No trace of a meteor was found at the scene of the hole but some scientists pointed out that it was possible that a meteor might have changed its course after entering the ground and buried itself several feet away from the hole. Experts on explosives discounted the theory that the hole might have been torn by a quantity of nitroglycerine. They declared that nitro glycerine of sufficient quantity to have caused the earth shock yesterday would have torn a much larger hole. Insofar as could be learned, it was said, there was no quantity of explosives being transported near Malinta yesterday.

Rev. F. L. Odenbach, noted astronomer in John Carroll University in Cleveland, expressed the opinion that it would have been entirely possible for a meteor to have caused a shock similar to that which rocked this section of the state yesterday.

It was particularly terrific in this section of Ohio. At Findlay, thirty miles away, the jar was so strong that it was believed a nitroglycerin plant near the town had exploded. Houses were shaken and persons were awakened from their sleep.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 11.—What was described today as a “brilliant meteor” was sighted here last night by many persons. It appeared in the sky early last evening. Some said a trail of smoke lingered several seconds after the meteor passed.

UTICA, N. Y., June 11.—A large red ball of fire which was sighted here last night was believed to have been a meteor. It fell from high in the sky and left a trail of white, resembling smoke. Some witnesses said tiny sparks dotted the smoke trail.

COLUMBUS, O., June 11.—A plot to destroy objectionable property or even to commit murder may be concealed in the mystery of the explosion at Malinta, O., which rocked northwestern Ohio yesterday. Prof. J. Ernest Carman, of Ohio State University, noted authority on meteors, suggested here today.

Expressing skepticism about the theory that the disturbance might have been caused by a falling meteor, Prof. Carman said that authorities may find that “somebody wanted to get rid of something.”

Professor Carman declared that “ninety-nine out of every 100 meteor stories are untrue.” “If the hole at Malinta was caused by a falling meteor,” he asked, “what happened to the meteor and how did it get out of the hole?”

SETTLEMENT HOLDS UP DIVORCE PLANS

SAN FRANCISCO, June 11.—Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor will get a divorce but not until they can agree on a property settlement, it was indicated today.

Their attorneys yesterday spent two hours vainly trying to decide on the distribution of their joint possession. The other problems, who should ask for the divorce and where, can be decided, the lawyers said, easily.

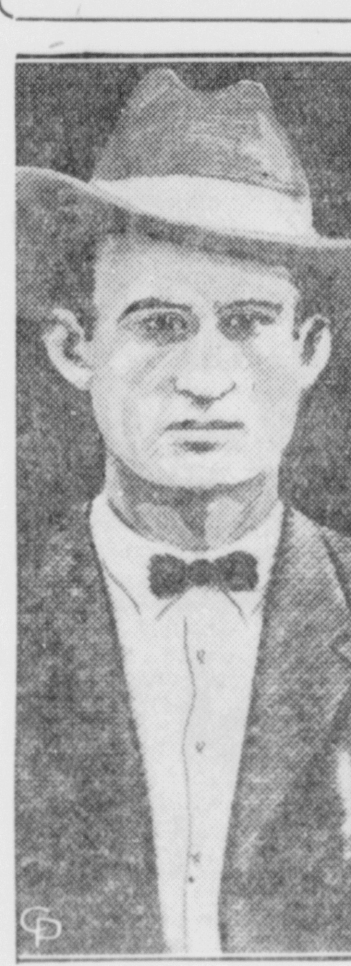

“We have made excellent progress,” the attorneys said. “The divorce is inevitable and only awaits settlement of this one point.”

The lawyers were going back, one to Reno to see the former heavyweight champion of the world, the other to Los Angeles to interview the movie actress, in another attempt to solve the difficulty. They will meet again in several weeks, they said.

RICHARD LOEB IS 26 YEARS OLD NOW

JOLIET, Ill., June 11.—Richard Loeb was to celebrate his twenty-sixth birthday today, his seventh in the Illinois State Penitentiary where he is serving a life term for the slaying of young Bobby Franks. Loeb, an employee of the green-housed Stateville Prison was permitted to see members of his family and receive presents of food from them.

ABANDON HOPE FOR RESCUING EIGHTEEN MEN

Rescue Ships Fail To Make Contact With Wrecked Sub

SHANGHAI, June 11.—Hope of rescuing the eighteen men trapped in the sunken submarine Poseidon 120 feet under water in the Yellow Sea was virtually abandoned today when rescue ships failed, despite frantic efforts, to establish contact with the wreck.

Admiralty divers who descended to the submarine were unable to attach rescue apparatus to it and reported that they heard no response to their signals to the prisoners. Their repeated rattling of Morse code letters on the side of the submarine brought no response.

A message from the aircraft carrier Hermes at the scene of the disaster denied reports that divers had heard signals from a compartment containing eight of the men saying that they were still alive.

The American submarine salvage vessel Pigeon, equipped with special rescue apparatus, hastened from Tsingtao to help the British cruisers Berwick and Cumberland, the destroyer Storm Cloud, the sloop Marathon and the tug St. Broeck at the scene of the accident.

The only hope of the entombed men lay in the use of the Davis third lung apparatus with special rescue equipment recently equipped.

The life belt and oxygen mask. If the mask is attached to the big submarine oxygen tanks the user may succeed in living a long time.

Forty-five minutes after the Poseidon was rammed by the Yuta, four men came up in these newly-invented life belts. The submarine sank within two minutes after the accident and thirty-one members of the crew saved their lives by jumping overboard. They were picked up by the Yuta.

ROME, June 11.—Captain Frank Hawks, famous American flying ace, treated himself to an artistic Italian haircut today. Objecting to German methods of cutting hair because a Berlin barber cut too much off the top of his head, Hawks hopped into his plane yesterday and sped across the Alps to Rome in the record time of three hours, thirty-one minutes.

Professor Discounts Meteor Theory In Strange Blast

CLEVELAND, June 11.—A meteor could not have caused the mysterious earth shock which rocked northwestern Ohio for miles in the vicinity of Malinta, O., early yesterday.

Definitely aligning himself against the theory that a celestial body had crashed to the earth with terrific force, Professor J. J. Nassau of Case University Observatory today made that statement in an exclusive interview with International News Service.

“A meteor,” Professor Nassau, a recognized astronomical authority, repeated, large enough to cause the shock reported at Malinta could not possibly have fallen without being observed throughout the eastern section of the United States. The vicinity of the spot where it dug into the earth would have been lighted as in broad daylight.”

Observers at the university reported no meteorites visible here after 9 o'clock Tuesday night, the professor stated. One meteor was observed for about two seconds about that time. It burned out almost immediately, he said.

Asked to advance a theory for the terrific earth shock, Professor Nassau declined to comment, saying he was not sufficiently familiar with that phase of science.

With the astronomer's positive declaration that the shock was not caused by a meteorite, geologists here united today in quest of a solution of the phenomenon which frightened residents out of their sleep, shattered windows for miles in the vicinity of Malinta, disrupted communication lines and caused other damage.

Two possible solutions for the appearance of the large hole at Malinta were advanced by Rev. F. L. Odenbach of John Carroll University, an authority on earthquakes. Either a shifting of a quicksand strata beneath the earth's crust, or a subterranean water hole or river which might have eaten away the earth from underneath, would create a hole in the earth similar to the one reported, he said. Rev. Odenbach did not believe the small crater was caused by an earthquake shock.

Ignition of an unknown natural gas strata under the ground from friction caused by a sudden shifting of the earth could easily have accounted for the terrific earth shock, some scientists believed. Such an explosion, however it was stated, would have blown fragments of earth into the air in large quantities.

COMING MARRIAGE WILL UNITE WEALTH

LONDON, June 11.—Climaxing a friendship of many years' standing, notice of intended marriage was filed at a registry office here today by Anthony Drexel Biddle, Jr., member of the wealthy and prominent Philadelphia family, and Mrs. Margaret Schulze, daughter of the late William Boyce Thompson of Yonkers, N. Y.

Both gave their ages as 34. Biddle was divorced from his first wife, the former Mary L. Duke, in Newburgh, N. Y., last March. At that time, it was reported he would be married to Mrs. Schulze as soon as her divorce from Theodore Schulze became final.

The forthcoming marriage will link two of America's wealthiest and most socially prominent families. Mrs. Schulze inherited a huge fortune upon the death of William Boyce Thompson recently.

Biddle and Mrs. Schulze obtained a license to marry at the same time they filed notice of their intentions, it was revealed. Neither was reachable today, but it was believed the ceremony will take place at the registry before the end of the week.

GAMBLING DEVICES AND LIQUOR SEIZED IN RAID WEDNESDAY

John Friend Faces Federal Charge In Dayton

Elaborate gambling paraphernalia was seized in a raid conducted jointly by county, federal and state officers who battered down locked doors and searched what they described as a combined “club house” and gambling establishment operated by John Friend, reputed bootlegger, on the Dayton-Xenia Pike, in Greene County, near the Greene-Montgomery County line Wednesday night.

The raiding officers swooped down upon the picturesque stone bungalow between 9 and 10 o'clock selecting a time when they believed comparatively few “guests” would be present to patronize the establishment.

Dividing their forces, the nine officers who took part in the raid, rushed the three outside entrances to the bungalow simultaneously only to encounter barred doors.

Sheriff John Baughn and his deputies sought to enter the rear door but Mrs. Mary Friend, wife of the proprietor, is said to have refused them admittance, whereupon the raiders, armed with sledge hammers, broke in each of the three doors at once.

In the cellar, the officers discovered a secret door in a wall leading to a beer compartment, they said. No beer was found but between fifty and seventy-five empty beer kegs were confiscated. They also found a strong room containing an air compressor and beer-cooling apparatus, the equipment being completely untouched, they reported.

Upon entering the cellar, the officers said they encountered Friend, owner of the bungalow, who was said to be engaged in breaking up beer kegs. The raiders seized two kegs and a quantity of wine. They poured out some of the wine but kept a few jugs for evidence.

The gambling equipment seized, brought to the county jail here, included a pool table, a dice or (Continued on Page Ten)

FORMER CONSUL IS HELD AS FUGITIVE

CHICAGO, June 11.—John C. Popovici, former Roumanian vice consul to Chicago and Cleveland, O., was to be given a hearing today on a fugitive warrant sworn to by Mrs. Mary Moian.

Mrs. Moian charges she furnished the $1,000 bond on which Popovici obtained his freedom in Cleveland after an action for non-support was brought against him by his wife, Helen.

Popovici, according to Mrs. Moian, forfeited the bond and came to Chicago. She followed, she said, to get him returned to Cleveland. Instead, according to her story, he persuaded her to advance him another $1,000 to finance a whole-sale egg business.

“It has been the consistent policy of the federal government to prohibit lotteries and kindred schemes to the extent of its power. There are plenty of precedents for exercise of congressional action in the case of radio advertising.”

Senator Fess' speech was devoted to laudation of the Republican party's history, from its foundation to the present, and to extolling the leadership of President Hoover.

“Instead of conceding the wise leadership in this time of distress,” he said, “carping criticism and belittling comment have become the daily pastime of our opponents.”

This generation will not likely fully appreciate the services of President Hoover in the part he has played in lessening the suffering during this period of world-wide depression.

“At such times critics are many and partisan criticism is bitter. All sorts of unsound nostrums and remedies are proposed, and passion and prejudice are appealed to for action.”

Home Of Non-Striking Miner Wrecked By Explosion

STEUBENVILLE, O., June 11.—A bomb was hurled at the home of a non-striking coal mine employee near here early today, inaugurating, it was feared, the use of violence in a program of mine disorders which recently spread to Ohio from western Pennsylvania.

The explosive, which barely missed a window in a bedroom where H. G. Malin, a non-union stand-patter, was sleeping, shattered other windows and wrecked the plaster in the house.

Although not actually threatened by strikers who have affiliated with the National Miners' Union, Malins said he heard yesterday that his home would be bombed unless he quit work and joined the movement to unionize all mines in this section.

Authorities said they believed the bomb was thrown by the strikers because a “quit work or be blown up” command has been sent to non-striking throughout this area.

Acting upon warnings from mine operators that communist agitators from the Pennsylvania fields have moved to Ohio, sheriffs of Jefferson, Belmont and Harrison Counties yesterday strengthened their forces to prevent anticipated outbreaks.

Additional special deputies were employed to keep order, and officials said they would do all possible to assure the safety of workmen.

The bombing, according to officials, is the outbreak which has been expected for several days. Demanding an eight-hour day and the right to affiliate with unions, more than 1000 employees are now on strike at the properties of five mines in this section.

PLANS BILL TO CONTROL RADIO

Would Halt Lottery Broadcasting

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Congressional action to control advertising over the radio, particularly to prohibit lottery advertising now illegal in newspapers will be demanded in the next session of Congress, Rep. E. L. Davis (D) of Tennessee announced today.

The bill which he will present to Congress, Davis emphasized, is designed to place radio advertising on the same plane as that of newspapers and to avoid censorship by any commission.

He also is considering legislation to prohibit firms from soliciting business by radio in states where it is unlawful for them to solicit.

Davis said: “Under present federal law, newspapers or other publications containing lottery advertising are unobtainable. There is no law applying to radios, and the Federal Radio Commission has declined to interfere with this class of advertising.”

“It has been the consistent policy of the federal government to prohibit lotteries and kindred schemes to the extent of its power. There are plenty of precedents for exercise of congressional action in the case of radio advertising.”

COUNTRY SHOULD BE THANKFUL FOR WISE LEADERS SAYS FESS

Praises President In Address; Scores Carping Critics

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Instead of carping criticism over hard times the country should be thankful that it has had through this period “the wise leadership” of President Hoover, Senator Simon D. Fess, chairman of the Republican national committee declared in an address today to several hundred young Republicans at a party conference.

The young Republicans were invited to the conference by their respective members of the national committee, and after a two-day session will return to their homes to promote party organization for the 1932 campaign. Several cabinet officers will address them tomorrow.

Senator Fess' speech was devoted to laudation of the Republican party's history, from its foundation to the present, and to extolling the leadership of President Hoover.

“Instead of conceding the wise leadership in this time of distress,” he said, “carping criticism and belittling comment have become the daily pastime of our opponents.”

SENATE COMMITTEE MAKES SMALL SLASH IN APPROPRIATION

Entire Building Sum
For Institution

The tentative biennial budget submitted on behalf of the O. S. and S. O. Home here for 1931-32 was approved, almost in its entirety, by the Ohio senate finance committee Wednesday, reductions totalling only $34,500 for the two-year period.

Taking into consideration the fact that this state institution has been sorely neglected for years and now is having a rapid growth in commitments as a result of the World War, the committee deemed it necessary to begin expansion work at the Home and to place old dilapidated structures in condition for use.

Every item for new buildings, improvements and betterments, totalling $760,000, was said to have been approved, notwithstanding the fact the committee has deleted virtually all such items for every other institution and department budget.

While institution officials had asked for an increased road budget in order to raise the standard from eight cents a meal to thirteen cents, the committee reduced the road item $8,000 for the first year and $17,000 for the second year on the ground that food is getting cheaper. Food allowances, however, were left at considerable above the last appropriations.

Another item of $5,500 deleted was for the publication of a history of the institution, prepared by Edward W. Hughes, parliamentary officer of the House of Representatives, a former pupil of the Home.

Though the tentative budget for the institution provided for salary increases for fourteen teachers and other employees, the committee, after much wrangling, voted to adhere to its policy of allowing no salary increases this year.

The requests of the Home for the two-year period totalled $1,979,429.25, including $407,700 for personal service, $738,729.25 for maintenance and $833,000 for additions and betterments.

All proposed new construction at Wilberforce University was deleted and its maintenance budget was ordered cut to the bone. Wilberforce suffered a further slash of $13,000.

VATICAN FEARS FIGHT IS LOST

Reopening Of Clubs Seems Remote

ROME, June 11.—Practically all hope that the church would be granted the right to reopen the Catholic Lay Clubs closed by the Fascist Government, was given up today in a statement issued by the Holy See in comment on the Italian government's answer to the Vatican's protest on the closing of the clubs.

Pope Pius XI, it was said, had particularly looked for conciliatoriness in view of the fact that his Holiness had appealed to King Victor Emmanuel, as one of the signatories to the Lateran Treaty which the Vatican claimed had been violated by the Italian government.

Not only was this lacking, but it was obvious that “Premier Mussolini pursues his own policy,” the Vatican spokesman said, adding that Mussolini apparently had no intention to permit the reopening of the Catholic Clubs and youth associations.

“The need of the hour is a leader with a vision to comprehend the problem and the courage to withstand organized clamor.”

“As was recently said, ‘we should be thankful we have at the head of the nation a man who is the embodiment of all that is capable, strong, patient, sympathetic; all that is protective, conservative, purposeful and beneficial.’ Such a man is President Hoover.”

NO WEDDING BELLS, SAYS LITA

Former Wife Of Chaplin, Only 23, Will Hesitate Before Next Leap

BY BONITA WITT

Central Press Staff Writer
NEW YORK, June 11.—Lita Grey Chaplin, youthful ex-wife of the screen star, is getting a bit weary of denying that she is to wed Georges Carpentier, the former boxer, or any of the other gentlemen with whom her name has been linked.

She "wants it definitely understood that she isn't going to marry Georges or anyone else for a long time. 'You see,' she explains, 'I am only twenty-three and I don't believe that I yet know the type of person I want to marry. My unhappy first experience with matrimony has not disillusioned me, but I am not ready to marry again for a long, long time. I was a mere baby when I married Charlie. He was an experienced man of the world, much superior to me in intelligence then. We had little in common.'

STILL ON FRIENDLY TERMS
Despite the bitterness which characterized their separation, Mrs. Chaplin says that she and her former husband are on friendly terms. When she and the children, Charlie, Jr., six, and Sidney, five, are in California they call on him frequently, usually staying for dinner.

The youngsters frolic and renew their acquaintance with their daddy whom they seldom see. "There's no reason why the children should know that their parents have had a big quarrel," Lita explains. They always are taken to see his pictures and talk of him constantly, although he seldom finds time to visit them.

If the children desire to go on the stage or into the movies when they are older, their mother will not object, but she insists that they must first finish their educations.

"Education comes first," she says. Then, if they are talented and they want to follow their father's and my profession, I will not stand in their way. I do think, however, that they will have a hard time living up to their father's reputation. I do not want them to grow up in the theater with education secondary."

When Charlie and Sidney are in New York they live in the country with Mrs. Chaplin's mother, where they can play and live natural lives. Although Lita, herself, played with Chaplin in "The Kid" at the age of twelve, she doesn't believe that the theater or movie lot

RESINOL HEALS SEVERE CASE OF PILES

"A few years ago my niece was ill and after being in bed several months she developed a very bad case of piles. As nothing she had used seemed to help her I advised Resinol Ointment which I had with me. After a few applications she was greatly relieved and before long was entirely healed." (Signed) Mrs. B. Stewart, 519 E. 12th St., St. Paul, Minn.

It is unnecessary to suffer from itching, bleeding, painful piles when Resinol Ointment gives such immediate relief. Many women use it regularly to relieve local itching caused by acid or irritating secretions. Free sample on request. Resinol, Dept. 91, Baltimore, Md. Sold by all druggists.

HOLLYWOOD AND MARRIAGE
Lita also is firm in her convictions about Hollywood romances. "Hollywood is bad for married happiness," she confides. "It seems as if everyone is looking for scandal, just hoping for a separation. Of course that didn't enter into our case. Our marriage couldn't last. We were so different in background and he was much older than I. A man of the world wedded to a 16-year-old child! The ordinary marriage, however, seldom turns out happily in Hollywood. A beautiful leading lady—perhaps they are on location together for months. The girl is playing opposite a fascinating hero. Those situations do not make for a happy marriage."

Thus the beautiful Mrs. Chaplin, who labors on the three-day circuit, despite the large settlement which she was awarded, sums up her estimate of marriage in the film colony.

The service was solemnized at high noon in the chapel of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Dayton.

Standards bearing white tapers and entwined with smilax were placed along the center aisle of the chapel, outlining the path of the bride and groom to the altar. The ceremony was performed before a background of greenery and clusters of pink peonies and pale pink hydrangeas. Seven branch

Consider your Adam's Apple!!* Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

Everyone has an Adam's Apple—every man—every woman has one. Touch your Adam's Apple with your finger. You are actually touching your larynx—this is your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. When you consider your Adam's Apple, you are considering your throat—your vocal chords.

"TOASTING" expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE—the modern cigarette. We sell these expelled irritants to manufacturers of chemical compounds. Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why the "TOASTING" Process includes the use of Ultra Violet Rays. LUCKY STRIKE—made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED"—an extra, secret and exclusive heating process. It is this process that expels these harsh irritants. No wonder 20,679 American physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating. No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple." Be careful in your choice of cigarettes.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

And every one that hath forsaken house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for mine sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life.—St. Matthew, xx, 29.

THE BEST MOVIES

An unfortunate thing happens in many cities, when some fine movie picture, produced under high standards of dramatic and pictorial art, fails to draw as much patronage as some less desirable film. Managers of picture theatres regret such a result, but if such pictures are not well patronized, it seems inevitable that less desirable kinds will be shown.

Moving pictures have a profound influence over the country. People through into the picture theatres, and if a certain set of ideas is prominent in these films, many people will acquire them.

Assailing undesirable pictures sometimes does more harm than good, by advertising them, so that many morbid curiosity seekers turn out to be thrilled by their questionable suggestions. When the people decline to patronize an undesirable picture the most effective form of censorship takes effect.

People who cherish high standards can do much to encourage the best pictures, if they would take more pains to patronize films of that character. They remark that frequently they do not know which are the pictures of the best type. A service is therefore rendered when organizations and groups of discriminating people take pains to spread the word around in advance that such and such pictures soon to be shown are clean and wholesome and helpful.

Churches could do more to help on the production of the best pictures, by permitting notices of such films to be posted on their bulletin boards, and otherwise commending them. Women's clubs have done much recently to spread such information. The pictures are precisely what the people demand. If they want good films, they will get them. And a picture can be fine and thrilling, without descending to coarseness or vulgarity.

TOO MANY FIRES

Fire losses in this country last year were greater than those of 1929 by more than $40,000,000. Arson and incendiarism reached the highest point in many years. The National Board of Fire Underwriters attributes this partly to drought and economic depression.

Most fires are distinctly preventable. Most people know perfectly the simple precautions which ought to be routine in every household—keeping matches in fireproof containers, keeping them away from children, disposing of cigarette stubs properly, fireproof receptacles for hot ashes from furnaces, fire screens before open fireplaces, and so on. It should be a matter of public disgrace, not merely a misfortune, to have any sort of damaging fire in home or store or public building.

STIMSON VISITS

Already Europe is aflutter over the prospect of entertaining Secretary Stimson this summer. The hard-working custodian of our foreign relations has let it be known that he wants to run over for a couple of months of "rest and relaxation." Our European friends are reported to intend that he shall get neither relaxation nor rest.

Ostensibly Secretary Stimson is going to Europe to escape a Washington summer, and perhaps to pick up incidentally some idea of how Europe regards the convening of the next disarmament in February, as now scheduled. Actually he will find himself forced to listen to all of Europe's woes—and they are many. The disarmament conference is only one of several in which this country is interested. There are also war debts and reparations and the tariff; and overshadowing all is the economic depression, which Europe ascribes, as it does most of its tribulations, to the United States.

As Secretary of state, Stimson will have to listen politely to all this grief—or be set down as another aloof and heartless American. Statesmen will pull him one way. The industrialists will yank him another. The press will bombard him from a third standpoint. While there need be no fear about his coming back with his head squarely on his shoulders, we have a feeling that for a man in his position seeking rest and relaxation this summer Europe presents the least promise of it in six continents.

An earthquake rocked England recently and sent Londoners scurrying into the streets. Almost as exciting as a former German invasion.

Almost half of Spain's cabinet are newspaper men. At least they know something about deadlines.

Apparently Nevada aspires to be the country's "segregated district."

A faithful reproduction of Mount Vernon is being exhibited in Paris, but the chances are that the Parisians would be more interested in a faithful reproduction of the mint.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has refused a plan for a general inquiry into the needs of the railroads. The needs of the railroads like those of the rest of us may be easily resolved into that for more money.

These are hard times on kings. Still, you don't hear much talk about getting rid of the king of Italy.

Other Editorial Thoughts

PUTS ONE OVER

In the days of swashbuckling finance, Theodore Vanderbilt decided to try a freight-rate war. First he wished to embarrass Jay Gould's Erie, and incidentally to strengthen his own road, the New York Central.

At this time, the rate for shipping cattle from Buffalo to New York was one hundred and twenty-five dollars a car load lot.

Vanderbilt reduced his rate to one hundred. Gould, countered with a charge of seventy-five. Central went to fifty; Erie to twenty-five; Central finally to a dollar a carload!

Gould couldn't get much lower than a dollar, and to all appearances gave up the battle. The rate on the Erie went back to normal, and the Commodore was exceedingly well pleased with himself. He had given Jay Gould a good tanning at last.

Not a head of cattle was being shipped over the Erie, while Central was carrying to capacity.

Vanderbilt's elation was short-lived, however, for he learned that Gould had bought up every steer west of Buffalo, and had been shipping them over Vanderbilt's line back and forth at a dollar a carload lot! — Exchange.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK.—The big problem today is not how to live within an income but how to live without one.

GIGGLE PROTECTION
It's all right, cheer up. Follow the advice of Uncle Sam's paid publicity man. Advertise an optimistic attitude.

As Axel Munthe says, author of "San Michele":
"Even the devil himself can't hurt a man who has not forgotten how to laugh."
It may sound like bunk, but there's a lot in it.

A LITTLE NONSENSE
You hear a heap these days about getting back to first principles. It's a good idea. Let's go "way back, as far back as the nursery, and there dig out as neat a bit of the psychology of happiness and good cheer as ever was written. The lesson is to be found in the volume captioned "Mother Goose," and deals with a chap named Johnny Grace, who had a pain in his face, "so bad," says the story, "that he couldn't spell a letter."

What happened?
"Along came Tommy Long, singing such a funny song, that Johnny laughed and found his face much better."

TRUTH IS MIGHTY
"I don't care if you know it," says Marjorie Rambeau, good actress, "I'm thirty-seven." Which recalls a story they tell of Maurice Francis Egan, educator, novelist, publicist, diplomat. "You are, indeed, a true Irishman," said a friend. "You never spoil a story for want of a few facts."

"Facts," laughed Egan, "are a nuisance when a man wants to get at the truth of things."

RECOMMENDATION
If you want to read something worth while, get a copy of "Noguchi" (Harpers) and learn the story of an artist whose art was science.

Hideyo Noguchi, peasant's son from an obscure Japanese province, stood before the world at the age of thirty-seven, honored by kings and nations.

Each of his scientific achievements would do honor to as many men, and the far-reaching results from his discoveries are bringing infinite good to untold millions of mankind.

Noguchi's pure culturing the germ of syphilis, his discovery of the causes of paresis and locomotor ataxia, his identification of Orlov fever with another obscure and hitherto unrelated disease, his work on trachoma and Rocky Mountain spotted fever, and finally his heroic death in Africa caused by the dread yellow fever he was investigating are recounted in Dr. Gustav Eckstein's masterful biography of the little Japanese genius.

It's as gripping as any novel you ever read.

TRAGEDY
New York wishes a number of Children Nobody Wants—hundreds of them, all in quest of foster parents. They sit wistfully in the child shelters provided by the city's adoption organizations where men and women may go and look at them.

Nobody calls for them. Foster parents seek blue-eyed, fair-haired baby girls, preferably a year or less; and the Children Nobody Wants are for the most part over three years old. They are victims of broken homes—hard times.

The boys and girls of twelve, thirteen, fourteen and fifteen don't even look up when prospective parents enter. They know they're hopeless cases. They're too big. They aren't "cute."

THE PICNIC SEASON IS ON

WASHINGTON.—Although it is hard to think how Calvin Coolidge could be worked into the 1932 Republican presidential picture, the fact remains that he is mentioned by G. O. P. politicians in connection with it quite frequently.

They do it only whisperingly, of course; one would hardly expect a Republican "regular" to express himself openly to any other effect than favorably toward President Hoover's renomination. Insurgents are ready enough to proclaim their opposition to him, but Mr. Coolidge would suit them no better.

In fact, the Coolidge-ites are so cautious that one might almost doubt having heard them aright, were it not that dispatches from French Lick referred to covert hints in the Northamptonian's direction by several G. O. P. governors, during the convention of state executives at the Indiana spa. A muttering which was audible also in French Lick cannot be altogether imaginary here in Washington.

That there are influential individuals among the Republican leaders who would like a presidential candidate other than Mr. Hoover next year is not a circumstance to be surprised at.

It was very well known that the Californian was nominated much against many of the old guardmen's wishes at Kansas City. They did not consider him a politician—not their kind, anyway. It is true that they felt the same way about Mr. Coolidge in 1924, but they got over it in his case; they have not done so in Mr. Hoover's. Perhaps they would, had his administration been as lucky as Mr. Coolidge's. It goes without saying that it has been the reverse, however.

Viewing prospects from the standpoint of today, probably few persons will dispute that Mr. Coolidge ought to be able to make a stronger run for the White House in 1932, with his record of five and a half years of uninterrupted prosperity there, than can reasonably be prophesied for Mr. Hoover, even if business improves considerably between now and next election day.

That is—the odds surely would powerfully favor Mr. Coolidge, provided he could get the nomination without any ill feeling.

Politicians quite generally assume that Mr. Coolidge chose not to run in 1928 because he foresaw a slump in the course of the ensuing quadrennium and cared to take no risk of having it occur while he was in office.

It does not seem so likely, as some folk argue, that the New Englander was calculating even then on being drafted in 1932, for Mr. Coolidge is fully keen enough to have realized in advance that exactly the situation would prevail which actually does appear certain to prevail—if the G. O. P. nominee's chances look tolerably good. Mr. Hoover himself will want a renomination; if they look so unsatisfactory that Mr. Hoover is willing to step aside, they will not look good enough to suit Mr. Coolidge.

Besides, Mr. Hoover obviously has no disposition to waive the precedent which entitles him to seek the voters' endorsement for a second term in the executive mansion. The administration's plans all are being shaped to that end. If anything, from all indications, the very fact that the luck has been largely against him thus far simply stiffens the Californian's determination to make every effort for a vindication of his policies.

How difficult it is for a White House first term to be eulogized out of a renomination, if he demands it, was demonstrated by the failure of as formidable a rival as T. R. to read President Taft in the 1912 G. O. P. convention, as badly as the latter's prestige was demoralized.

Even though it were possible, Mr. Coolidge's own boosters admit it would wear the party wide open, which is just what the Northamptonian never would do, as they also agree.

Nevertheless, the idea of conscripting Coolidge to be discussed sotto voce. It would be poor betting that it will eventuate.

MENU HINT

Beef Steak Broiled
Baked New Potatoes
Green Peas Radishes Lettuce
Strawberry Delicious
Coffee or Tea

This is a dinner menu which will be welcomed by the family. The strawberry delicious will serve eight.

Today's Recipes

Strawberry Delicious—One-half pint fresh strawberries, one and one-fourth cups sugar, one-half cup quick cooking tapioca, one-half teaspoon salt, stirred into three cups boiling water, two cloves. Wash, hull and chop fine the strawberries, add one cup sugar and let stand two hours. Place tapioca in double boiler. Pour over it the boiling salted water, add the one-fourth cup sugar and cloves and let cook fifteen or twenty minutes. Remove cloves. Pour into eight glass dessert dishes and let cool, then add to each dish two tablespoons cream and lastly two tablespoons strawberries.

Suggestions

Tea Syrup
For those who like their iced tea sweetened, try making a syrup of one cup sugar to one-half cup water (boil all until dissolved), then serve this with iced tea instead of sugar. It blends with the tea much more readily and is more economical.

Renewing Linoleum

Paint the worn linoleum with a silver-gray flat paint. When dry, sponge-stipple with a delft blue paint. A little black may be sponged stippled in with this if desired. Varnish over with a clear varnish and your linoleum is just as good as new. Gray and green with a little black also makes a very pretty combination.

A DISTINGUISHED SCIENTIST SITTING IN THE AUDIENCE

By Arthur DeV. Carpenter

Some years ago the writer delivering a lecture before high school students in Ft. Wayne, Ind., made use of the old theory of the earth's shrinking interior that left the crust too large, so it buckled up, making mountain ranges. A gentleman in the audience conversed with him at the conclusion, advancing the "Continental Drift" theory, and how, by drift to westward of the Americas the Rockies and the Andes were pushed up. This theory is based on the scientific assumption that 1,000 miles under us there is a dense sticky liquid or molten glass on which the continents rest. Professor F. B. Taylor, famous geologist and inventor of the theory, was the man addressing the writer.

Eggs, Milk Valuable In Diet

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Eggs and milk are valuable ingredients of the normal diet for the obvious reason that they are designed by nature to initiate growth and stimulate vitality in a young and greedy organism. The nutrient content of an egg must be such as to start all life processes of the cell at the highest rate of speed. It is not certainly known exactly what all these substances are. They have not been identified nor isolated chemically. They may be similar to or identical with the vitamins or they may be entirely different.

Some insight into the existence of these substances is found in the studies of Rose and McCallum. The title of their report is itself significant—"The effect of adding an egg to a diet already adequate." The diet being received was then sufficient to supply the energy and growth and vitamin and mineral needs of the body before the egg was added. The addition of the egg was found to result in improvement much the same as the liberal use of milk provides. The "adequate diet" eaten before the addition of the egg was sufficient to promote growth in young animals, but the egg was not only more economically utilized for growth as shown by gains in weight per thousand calories, but also resulted in greater growth of the young.

The first experiments done on this subject were on animals. The amount of eggs added to the experimental animal's diet was the equivalent of about an egg a day for a child. It is concluded that eggs and milk are once more demonstrated to be important staple foods for the production of a vigorous race.

Observing children, it was found that the addition of an egg a day to a diet already adequate resulted in improvement in the general health and especially in the hemoglobin content of the blood.

Eggs weigh from 50 to 70 grams on the average. There are larger eggs than 70-gram eggs, but a 70-gram egg is a big egg, and a 50-gram egg is a little egg. A 70-gram egg contains 7 grams of protein and 9 grams of fat, which is, roughly, 90 calories. Eggs contain the minerals, iron, phosphorus, sulphur and calcium, and Vitamins A, E, F and G. On the whole, a very nutritious and useful combination in small space.

Shoe Dye Poisoning
When brown shoes are dyed black, the dye, or some part of it, is often absorbed through the skin of the feet, causing a dark blue color to appear on the skin of the whole body. If the shoes are allowed to dry several days this is almost always prevented.

The condition has been frequently reported. The chemical at fault is either aniline or nitrobenzene. Sometimes it is 20 per cent orthotoluidine. A case has been reported in a baby eight months old. Her mother thought the white canvas uppers of her shoes were too soiled to clean well, so she dyed them. The shoes were put on the baby's feet within an hour after the dye was put on, and it had not entirely dried. An hour after the shoes were put on the baby fell over in a faint. Her skin turned dark blue, and she seemed in a very critical condition. Most of these patients, however, seem sicker than they are. The baby recovered and seemed quite normal and natural in 24 hours.

Folks Must Battle Own Troubles

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"My Dear Miss Lee: I am confronted by a problem and any light you might throw on it I would certainly appreciate. It is not about me, but about a very dear pal of mine."

"We have gone together since we were very small boys and know each other very well. We are inseparable. He always brings his problems to me and I do the same with him."

"He is well educated, good looking and well liked by all of his friends. He has already made a name for himself in writing. Some months ago he met a very nice girl, and became 'love at first sight' with him. The girl was very nice to him, and I thought that they were going to become 'steady.' However, there was some kind of a misunderstanding and she dropped him. I think that she was in the wrong in the way she treated him."

"Ever since that event I haven't been able to do anything with him. He won't go out, he refuses to go with anyone, or do anything. Even sometimes he hardly seems to notice me. I have done everything that I could think of, and it does not seem to do any good. He has written to her several times, but none of his letters were answered."

You can't do much, my dear boy, but leave your friend to battle with his own disappointment. Ask him to work these things out themselves; no one can help them—at least not by you. You can only stand by and let him see by your words and actions that you are a true friend on whom he can rely, and wait for time to lighten his sorrow or for the lady to relent.

Unhappy: It is possible the young man has been prejudiced against you, but also probable that he has just lost interest—the particular interest that he had in you. It is unfortunate that you like him so well, but I can't see what you can do about the matter.

Of course if you were very close friends it would not be amiss to ask him outright what his chances are, saying that you have missed his friendship.

Blonde: If you and the boy friend quarrel whenever you meet, it would probably be best that you keep apart for some time. Maybe you will be able to enjoy one another's society more when you meet again.

If you think you can agree after this separation, however, why not call him up and say you're sorry for your part of the quarrel and resolve not to spat again? As to getting the idea of joining the navy out of his head, don't oppose him, but tell him you'll miss him when he's away. He's probably saying that just to tease you, anyway.

Charles: Here are the answers to your questions as well as I can answer:

1. A marriage license is procured at the marriage license bureau at city or county courthouse.
2. In some states a marriage may be performed the same day as the license is procured. There is no waiting period in your state.
3. A marriage license costs two or three dollars, according to the law of the state in which it is procured.
4. No payment is necessary to keep a marriage license from being published. A request is all that is necessary, but not always granted.
5. The minister who performs the ceremony has no fixed charge. He is usually paid five or ten dollars, more or less, according to the means of the bridegroom.
6. Yes.
7. No.
8. If you do not look your age you had better have your birth certificate with you.
9. You must be 21 and the girl 18 to be legally married in your state.
10. Yes, and the minister or justice to perform the ceremony.
11. The ceremony lasts from five minutes to an hour, according to the service that is used. A justice of the peace would probably marry a couple in a few minutes.
12. No.

MARY ANN: If you were unjust to the boy friend said things you should not, the only thing to do is to apologize. And the only way to learn to control that unruly little tongue, my dear, is to learn to think before you speak, which is much, much more difficult than it sounds. And "if at first you don't succeed, try, try, try again." As to his not taking you to shows, it may be that he hasn't the money, and it may be that he isn't interested in shows.

Girl Mourns Depilatory's Odor

By GLADYS GLAD

Doty's lament is one that is made very frequently by women. And unfortunately, there is not, to my knowledge, any such thing as an absolutely odorless depilatory. Such preparations inevitably have an unpleasant scent because of the nature of their constituents. It's unavoidable. And although it is now possible to procure perfumed depilatories, even in these the disagreeable odor cannot wholly be disguised.

However, the skin will not retain any of the unpleasant odor if the depilatory is properly removed. The removal of a depilatory is always rather a messy task. But no matter how unpleasant you find it, don't rush through the procedure and risk doing it unsatisfactorily. A soft cloth, and clear, tepid water should be used to remove the preparation. The water should be laved over the treated areas until the hardened mixture is completely removed. The rinsing of the depilatory from the legs and arms must be very thorough. One water is never sufficient. Every bit of the preparation must be removed from the skin. If any remains, the unpleasant odor will cling to the body. And moreover, the sulphur and slaked lime that most depilatories contain, if permitted to remain on the skin, may cause an irritation that may lead to extreme soreness.

Make the rinsing process as speedy as possible—but also as thorough as possible. You must be sure to use at least three clear waters for the rinsing, if you wish to be entirely free from the odor of the depilatory, and also if you wish to avoid any soreness of the skin of the treated areas. And it is also advisable always to apply a soothing lotion or greaseless cream after the use of a depilatory on the skin.

There is said to be a growing feeling in British sporting circles that "Painting" Phil Scott, described as the "luckless swooning swan of England," should retire at once and give up (besides himself) his title of British heavyweight boxing champion.

This general belief on the other side gained added weight following Scott's humiliating defeat at the hands of Young Stribling, the Atlanta, Ga., heavyweight, in London recently.

There is talk of matching him for another "fight," despite the fact Scott, who still remains heavyweight champion of his own country, was made to look like a novice by Stribling.

That Scott can only perpetuate a situation humiliating to himself and British boxing if he continues to hold the "championship," is the opinion almost unanimously expressed by British newspapers and the public.

The London Daily Express sums up the situation this way: "The only blows which Scott delivered in his fight with Stribling were knock-out blows at British boxing prestige. He certainly entered the ring unfit and he gave every appearance of having no heart for a fight."

Says the London Daily Mail: "Philip Suffling, to give him his real name, passes out, and we must begin all over again to find a heavyweight champion of English birth."

Judging from their comments in the public print, heavyweight wrestlers in this country are slowly approaching a point where, if they are not careful, they will get so mad they will want to wrestle each other. So far they have evaded the issue nicely.

Having determined that certain species of fish are in danger of depletion and require added protection in the inland fishing district, the Ohio Conservation Council has ordered that for a five-year period, commencing June 16, the bag limits per day for various species shall be as follows:

White bass, twenty; yellow perch, twenty; catfish (combined species), twenty; sunfish, including long-ear sunfish, punkin-seed and green sunfish (combined species), twenty; and further providing that these species, along with black bass, rock bass, bluegill and crappies, shall be not more than forty, and not more than two days' legal catch will be allowed in possession at any one time. Laugh this off Mart Schmidt and the rest of you fishermen.

GRAHAM PAINTS AND DOWNTOWNERS PLAY TIE OVERTIME TILT

Luck Helps Second Placers; Triple Play Is Argued

All reports are not yet in, but a post-game canvass of the opinions of the cigar store "experts" revealed one thing to be certain—that it is the concensus of all the Graham Paints and Downtown Country Club softball teams struggling eleven innings to a 5 to 5 tie, the National League skrimish being finally called on account of darkness at Cox Battlefield Wednesday eve.

The "experts" freely expressed the opinion the Paints deserved to win, only to have the so-called "breaks" of the ball game go against them, particularly in the first half of the eleventh round when the Downtowners retired the side by executing what will go down in the records as a triple play.

It must be admitted the Downtowners were doubtless fortunate to escape with a tie. It may have been they were generously equipped with rabbits' feet, four-leaf clovers, horse shoes and other tokens of good luck.

For the first six innings the second-placers were completely futile. They were helpless at bat and the Paints were leading by a score of 5 to 0.

Lloyd Downey, Graham's hurler, was pitching a magnificent game and had not allowed the semblance of a hit for five innings and two-thirds of the sixth, but three errors a walk and a single enabled the Downtowners to score three times in the seventh, and in the eighth they leveled the count when four hits produced four runs.

The ninth and tenth innings were scoreless, and in the eleventh the Paints staged an uprising which terminated in a fluke triple play, about which the boys are still arguing. With runners on first and second by virtue of singles, Milburn hit a low liner to left. Whelton LeSourd "trapped" the ball or caught it was the burning question involved in the general argument which followed, but the umpires ruled the ball had been caught. One runner was retired at the plate, and while the debate grew in volume Finlay made all four of the bases, touching each bag to double up all and sundry runners. It was perhaps just as well the Downtowners failed to score in their half of the eleventh and the game was called on account of darkness.

The Paints opened the game with a vicious attack which produced four runs in the first inning. L. Cope was safe on an error, W. Cope singled, Haverstick did likewise and Milburn propelled a tremendous home run to deep left field. The Paints added another in the third on two errors without making a hit.

Downey twirled a marvelous game for the Paints and had his strike-out ball working to perfection, as "Skip" will testify. He established a record by fanning no less than fifteen batters, whiffing every player on the Downtown team except Marshall, a newcomer on the team, at least once.

Altogether, he allowed only six hits while his mates assaulted Frame, opposing hurler, for twelve bingles. Willie Cope obtained three hits for Graham's to lead the attack, Frame accidentally getting two for the Downtowners.

Central High will play the All-Stars Thursday night. Lineup:

TONY LAZZERI NOT TRADED BUT WILL BE RETURNED TO LINE-UP

NEW YORK, June 11.—Far from trading Tony Lazzeri to Washington or any other club, Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees is going to give the San Francisco Italian another chance to make good at second base, his old position.

The wallowing wop from Telegraph Hill, who has been the victim of the most mystifying batting slump of the 1931 campaign, may return to the midway post during the current series with the Chicago White Sox here. He has been working out at second in morning practice recently. Used at third base most of the season, Tony has batted only .234 to date.

"Lazzeri will be back in the game soon," said McCarthy this morning in denying a report that the one-time premier second sacker of the league would be traded to Washington for pitcher Bump Hadley and Jack Hayes, utility infielder. "His leg went bad some time ago and I had to take him out a couple of times. His leg is all right now and his arm is as strong as it was three years ago."

The idea of a trade involving Lazzeri aroused little enthusiasm among New York fandom today. For five years a brilliant fielder and a dangerous hitter with runners on the bases, "Poosh 'em up" Tony has become a fixture at the local ball orchard. He batted under .300 only once.

This year "poosh 'em up" has been pushing the ball into the air via the pop fly route instead of pushing it over the fences. What to do with Tony has been one of McCarthy's most aggravating problems.

A lot of water has passed under the bridge since that day last fall when Marse Joe, who had never seen his new club in action, made the flat declaration that Tony would play third and Ben Chapman second. Since then Chapman has been converted into a left fielder, Joe Sewell has been secured to play third and Jimmy Reese has been holding down the second base job.

If Lazzeri returns to the game, Reese will be the man to be benched, for McCarthy said today that Chapman will stay in left field and that Sewell will remain at third base. Reese has not been hitting well.

McCarthy, like Roger Peckinpaugh of Cleveland, has not given

PAINTERSVILLE IN WIN FROM CENTRAL

Loose handling of the ball on defense brought about an 8 to 3 defeat for Central High School's softball team in a non-league game with the Famous Autos at Paintersville Wednesday night, the Bucaneros making six miscues in the field.

The Autos obtained thirteen hits as compared with five for Central High and won the contest by virtue of heavy hitting, intermingled with errors in the first five innings. Score by innings:

Central 009 002 001—3 5
Autos 101 240 008—8 13

up hope of catching the league-leading Athletics.

"Mack's ten-game lead could be wiped out in ten days," says Joe optimistically. "Remember the year when the Yanks blew a thirteen-game lead? And look at Cleveland's twelve-game losing streak a while back. The same thing might happen to the A's."

"I believe our pitching will improve shortly. The hurlers were thrown out of their stride by the long string of postponements on our western trip. Gomez and Ruffing are pitching fine ball. Pippas will be all right as soon as he gets one good game under his belt. There is no reason why Sherid shouldn't be a winner."

"The fact is that all the pitchers in the league, except the Philadelphia and Washington staffs, have been in-and-out performers. I have a hunch the Yanks are due to get a lot of good pitching."

ANTIOCH IS VICTOR OVER WILBERFORCE

Maintaining its undefeated status in intercollegiate tennis competition this season, Antioch College's net team triumphed over Wilberforce University's previously unbeaten racquet wielders by a margin of 4 to 3 in a match on the Wilberforce clay courts Wednesday afternoon.

Wilberforce swept both doubles matches, but Antioch was superior in the singles engagements, winning four of the five matches.

In the most brilliant singles match of the afternoon, Maceo Hill, captain of the Wilberforce net squad, vanquished Hoerr, star of the Antioch team, in a bitter three-set duel. After dropping the first set at 2-6, Hill rallied and won the next two by scores of 6-4, 6-1. Hill was formerly national color-intercollegiate singles champion and national junior singles champion, and at present is the national indoor singles titleholder.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, June 11.—Under the lead of the amusement stocks and specialties, the market moved into a slightly higher range of prices in the early trading today.

Fox Film responded briskly to the overnight report of the election of a powerful and influential board of directors composed of leading bankers and industrialists in New York and other financial centers. The dividend "news" was good, the stock having been put on a $2.50 annual basis, with the prospect held out of the return to a $4 basis by the end of the year. Selling at 20½, Fox Film showed a new gain of 3 points and a 7-point recovery from the low of last week. Loews, Paramount and other theatrical stocks rose a point or less, and further improvement was recorded in amusement bonds.

HUSBAND AND WIFE GET DEGREES

WHEN the names of Wanda Lewis and Malcolm Lewis were read as degreees were conferred at Wilberforce University Thursday afternoon, few persons present realized the significance of the similarity of their last names.

For Wanda Lewis is Mrs. Malcolm Lewis, wife of the "Mal" Lewis whose exploits on the gridiron as a member of the Bulldog eleven are now history. Lewis received a degree of B. S. in Agriculture and Mrs. Lewis received a degree of B. S. in Education. This is the first time in several years that husband and wife have received degrees in the same graduating class at Wilberforce.

Miss Gladys Jones, daughter of President Gilbert H. Jones, was also a member of the class.

FOUND GUILTY FOR RESISTING OFFICERS

Charged with having interfered with an officer in the performance of his duties, Harry Soddors, Jamestown, was adjudged guilty by Probate Judge S. C. Wright following a hearing Wednesday. The court deferred passage of sentence for three days to permit the filing of a motion for a new trial.

Soddors is a brother of Arthur Soddors, Stringtown Road, who was fined $100 and costs by Judge Wright Wednesday for possessing liquor. Vella, wife of Arthur Soddors, was also assessed $30 and costs for resisting an officer during a liquor raid at the Soddors residence five miles from Xenia last Saturday night.

The charge placed against Harry Soddors resulted when he allegedly tried to prevent Sheriff John Baughn from lodging Mr. and Mrs. Soddors in jail last Monday.

IDENTIFY VICTIM AS FAIRFIELD MAN

A man fatally injured when struck by an auto at Troy and Leo Sts. in Dayton Monday night, was identified by Dayton police Thursday as Charles Clark, 53, a blacksmith at Fairfield.

Identification was made through records in the bureau of identification at Dayton police headquarters, a record having been made of Clark's finger prints when he was arrested in 1927 on a minor charge. Clark was struck by an auto of Harold Moore, 19, of 1119 Clay St., Troy, after he stepped from between parked machines into the path of the car.

Police were unable to identify the victim from papers found in his clothing and the body lay at an undertaking establishment two days. The crash victim is survived by five sons.

Chaplin's "Find"

It would appear that Charlie Chaplin's European trip, taken for a much-needed vacation, is turning into a voyage of discovery, for hard upon the heels of his "find" of Patricia Detering, who, he says, has everything, comes another discovery. This time the melancholic pantomimist is wonder-stricken by the beauty, charms and artistic ability of Florella Constantine (above), a Roumanian brunette. Chaplin has recommended her to a well-known film company for a

ALLEGED BIGAMIST PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Accused of bigamy, John H. Wheeler, 34, colored, 1037 E. Second St., is being held by police pending an investigation of a charge that he re-married recently without being legally divorced from his first wife.

Arraigned before Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Thursday morning, Wheeler pleaded not guilty, asserting he married again when he learned his first wife had obtained a divorce.

Wife number one, living in Philadelphia, Pa., brought about his arrest and the man's hearing has been deferred until her arrival in Xenia. She is expected here Saturday.

Poems that Live

"AWAKE! AWAKE!"

A WAKE! awake! the stars are pale, the east is russet gray;

They fade, behold the phantoms fade, that keep the gates of Day;

Throw wide the burning valves, and let the golden streets be free,

The morning watch is past—the watch of evening shall not be.

Put off, put off your mail, ye kings, and beat your brands to dust;

A surer grasp your hands must know, your hearts a better trust;

Nay, bend aback the lance's point, and break the helmet bar—

A noise is on the morning winds; but not the noise of war!

For aye, the time of wrath is past, and near the time of rest,

And honor binds the brow of man, and faithfulness his breast,

Behold, the time of wrath is past, and righteousness shall be, And the Wolf is dead in Arctady and the Dragon in the sea!

Theatrical World Mourns Its Grand Old Man

David Belasco Has Made His Last Exit, But the Fruits of His Genius Will Keep His Memory Fresh in the Hearts of Theatre Lovers.

Mrs. Leslie Carter • Lenore Ulric • Jane Cowl

As a poet is remembered for his poems, an artist for his pictures and a novelist for his books, so will David Belasco, whose death has plunged the theatre into mourning, be remembered for the stars he made and the magnificent work he did in nearly half a century of association with the theatre. Among the brilliant actresses whom he discovered and developed were Mrs. Leslie Carter, Jane Cowl, Lenore Ulric and his most recent find, Helen Gahagan. Belasco had the genius for recognizing genius in others, and that same genius that he discovered and developed will be his memorial for all time in the theatrical world.

By ALICE ALDEN

The lamp of the "maker of stars" has been extinguished. The lights are out and the curtain has rolled softly down. But the stars shine on in the dazzling firmament of the theatre, stars, discovered by the greatest of all theatrical astronomers, David Belasco.

Of all the countless people, theater-goers, associates and friends, who mourn the great showman, none are more sincere in their grief than that procession of artists, discovered by Belasco, tutored and made famous by him. The list is a long one, ranging from the scintillating Mrs. Leslie Carter to the brilliant Helen Gahagan, now starring in the last Belasco production, "Tonight, or Never."

It includes the dynamic Lenore Ulric, Judith Anderson, Frances Starr and David Warfield. It was almost fifty years ago that Belasco began to teach acting in his spare time. The amazing performance at the old Lyceum Theatre soon became the talk of the profession and actors and actresses and gifted amateurs besieged the director to be permitted to warm themselves at the thespian fires that he had lighted. The greatest of all his pupils was undoubtedly Mrs. Leslie Carter who had twice applied to Belasco for tutelage. Mrs. Carter sold jewels and other possessions to maintain herself while studying with Mr. Belasco, but her performance in 1890 in "The Ugly Duckling" established her as a great artiste and amply repaid her sacrifice and her teacher a better in her. Her great triumph was in "Zaza" which she played both here and in England. When Mrs. Carter remarried in 1906 she quarrelled with Belasco, an estrangement that continued until only last month. Mrs. Carter declared recently that Belasco had blamed himself for the quarrel.

Next Belasco discovered and developed David Warfield and another one of his finds was Mary Pickford who scored a signal success in "The Poor Little Rich Girl." Frances Starr was playing a small role in a Belasco production when the producer noticed her expressive hands. He trained her and she became one of the greatest actresses of the day. Belasco spotted Leo Dietrichstein in the Old German Theater in New York and coached him to stardom and made him one of the most distinguished actors on the English speaking stage. Another actress who mounted the ladder to stardom with the help of Belasco is Ina Claire, now a movie star.

In recent years, many of the greatest Belasco triumphs centered about his tempestuous personality of Lenore Ulric. Her first great Belasco success was in "Tiger Rose." Other signal triumphs were scored in "Kiki," "The Harem" and as the Harlem belle in "Lulu Belle." Her last appearance with the Belasco interests was in "Mina," a strange affair that seemed to have more to do with dynamo than drama.

Belasco's latest and last production, "Tonight or Never," included in its cast another Belasco find, Helen Gahagan. As the lovely prima donna in that charming play, she was a living example of Belasco training and coaching. Miss Gahagan, deeply grateful and attached to her distinguished mentor and friend, collapsed when she learned of his death. Members of the cast are happy that although "D. B." did not witness the premiere of the play he saw it after his recovery from the attack of pneumonia that laid him low during the winter.

And so, the great showman has taken his last encore and passed through the final stage door. It has been said that the art of the actor is the most fleeting because it leaves no actual work or memento behind it. But Belasco the producer the showman, the playwright, the maker of stars, will live on as a tradition, as a goal for all lovers of the American theatre. Genius can never wholly die.

EXAMINATION FOR POLICE VACANCIES

Three vacancies on the Xenia police department will be filled through a civil service examination to be conducted by the Civil Service Commission at City Hall at 7:30 o'clock Thursday night.

Prospective applicants, expected to number between twenty and forty, will be required to produce health certificates signed by a physician, while ex-service men who take the examination must produce their discharge papers.

The examination was called to enable City Manager M. S. Smith to make permanent appointments of two regular patrolmen and a day desk sergeant on the police force.

INJURY AIDS AUTO THIEF

DEL NORTE, Colo., June 11—Wilbur Crowley, arrested here in an automobile stolen at Monte Vista, Colo., told police he had fractured his arm last November in an auto accident in Florida. Penniless, Crowley was unable to obtain aid. "I'll plead guilty, or do anything to get where somebody will fix my arm." Local authorities, instead of prosecuting, arranged for Crowley to receive medical aid.

NOT TO PROSECUTE OSCAR GOINGS FOR POSING AS OFFICER

Although Oscar Goings, 51, colored, Xenia, posing as a "wealthy United States marshal," wrote impassioned letters to eighteen women in Ohio, Kentucky, and Indiana, he was not prosecuted on a charge of impersonating an officer, according to information received by police Tuesday from Paul H. Creswell, Xenia, United States marshal for the Southern Ohio district.

Arrested in Xenia recently on the complaint of a New Castle, Ind., woman, whose suspicions were aroused when Goings evaded a meeting and after a sweetheart had warned her "all was not well" with her romance, the Negro was held for investigation.

The inquiry developed, however, that the amorous letter writer had received no money from any of the women with whom he corresponded had never worn a badge nor appeared in public in the guise of an officer, so the department of justice ordered him released. Authorities confiscated a large bundle of love letters Goings had received from women, including a Cincinnati widow with two children, whom he was making arrangements to marry June 15, it is said.

In his letters the colored man had described himself as a lonely U. S. marshal, living in a palatial home on the drive to the O. S. and S. O. Home in Xenia, and seeking the companionship of some refined woman. Actually, his only home was a cot in a slaughter house near the city limits where he acted as caretaker and performed occasional jobs as a laborer.

Woman Trapped in "Dream House"

One of the largest dope rings on the Pacific Coast, with branches in New York, was unearthed in a 16-room "dream house" in Oakland, Calif., (shown above). Edna Lewis, 34, (insert) asserted to be connected with the ring which operated the mansion as a "dope cure sanitarium," was trapped in San Francisco by California narcotic agents. The roomy house, with spacious grounds, was known among addicts as a "dream house" where they could go and "live like millionaires for a couple of weeks." The ring is being probed further.

OLDEST GRADUATES OF WILBERFORCE U. HONORED THURSDAY

A feature of the Diamond Jubilee and commencement celebration at Wilberforce University this week was the honoring by the university of its two oldest living graduates.

The graduates thus honored, were Miss Hallie Q. Brown, nationally famous club woman and lecturer, and Mrs. E. F. Lee, widow of one of the university's first presidents. Both were presented with huge bouquets of flowers in token of the university's esteem. They were members of the graduating class of 1873.

Miss Brown served as toastmistress for the alumni breakfast, Thursday morning in the dining room of Shorter Hall. Active for her years, and brilliant of mind, she furnished an inspiration for the young graduates.

Mrs. Lee, whose home adjoins the campus, was unable to be present at the breakfast but sent the following message:

"My connection with Wilberforce, dating from childhood days of 1859, has seen her steady forward movement. The class of 1872 looked upon only the promise of what graduates of 1931 have had as realization.

"To have been connected with the early days of what should prove a monument to Negro effort, to have been with Wilberforce in her pioneering days—if one might so express it—leaves one a legacy of gratifying reflection."

"My heart asks for her going forward, and the past argues for such a future. May her Diamond Jubilee carry to all who have loved and known her a radiant significance."

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 10.—Spanking one's daughter for sitting on the front porch kissing boys is permissible in this community. Arrested on a charge of brutally beating his 15-year old daughter, a father informed the court that he felt he had a right to spank the girl because she spent too much time on the front porch kissing boys. The charge was dropped.

Will Double Murder Expose Crime-Politics Alliance?

Sensational Disclosures Looked for in Investigation Into the Murder of Crawford and Spencer, Anti-Vice Crusaders.

THE MAN WHO DEFIED THE UNDERWORLD
DAVID H. CLARK
ELECT HIM
Municipal Court Judge
Office No. 7
TUESDAY, MAY 5

Taking up the cudgels on behalf of the law-abiding element of Los Angeles and Hollywood, Charles Crawford, millionaire politician, and Herbert F. Spencer, veteran newspaperman, waged a ceaseless war upon the forces of vice and corruption until their tongues were still by assassin bullets. Many believe that their deaths will complete the work that they started in life, as the investigation into their murders promises to lift the lid off organized crime and its relation to politics in Los Angeles. Though their murders were not a great surprise, considering the enemies they had made in the underworld, the arrest of David H. Clark, which followed, was a distinct shock. Clark, a former deputy prosecutor in the District Attorney's Office, has won an enviable reputation as a brilliant and fearless lawyer, and was a candidate for Municipal Judge of Los Angeles. Police are also seeking June Taylor, alleged underworld hanger-on, and one-time confidante of Albert Marco, local vice chief, whom Clark sent to prison.

LOS ANGELES, June 11.—In this enlightened age, the Year of Our Lord 1931, killings are no longer news, that is, unless the killer gets caught. But the double murder of Charles Crawford, prominent politician, and Herbert F. Spencer, veteran newspaperman, both of Los Angeles, promises not only to be news, but sensational news of graft, protection and all the other unsavory, odorous things that are offshoots of an alliance between organized crime and politics. Charles Crawford had been for years a crusader against corrupt practices in politics. Being a millionaire, he could afford the expensive, if somewhat dangerous hobby of chopping off the tentacles that reached up from the underworld and dragged men to whom citizens looked for guidance down into the quagmire of vice and corruption.

In Spencer, Crawford found a willing and able helper. With a background of twenty years as a police reporter, Spencer was said to have more sources of information about the doings of the underworld than any man in Los Angeles. Recently the veteran scribe bought part of the "Critic of Critics," a liberal magazine, and used that organ in his and Crawford's campaign against the gangsters, gamblers and racketeers of Los Angeles and Hollywood. In the issue current at the time of his murder, Spencer threatened to expose the hidden power of the underworld. That he himself had been threatened is obvious from an article that appeared in his publication declaring that if any member of his staff were molested a safe deposit box in a certain bank would reveal the names, haunts and habits of all those who would be interested in closing the editor's mouth.

When one considers the unscrupulous enemies Crawford and Spencer are sure to have made as a result of their anti-vice campaign, the killing is not surprising, but the sensational developments that followed are astonishing in their unexpectedness.

David H. Clark, former assistant to District Attorney Buron Fitts, was arrested, and is now charged with the double murder. Clark, who has built up an enviable reputation as a prosecutor, was a candidate for Municipal Judge of Los Angeles, and his candidacy was vigorously opposed by Crawford and Spencer. The police theory is that the double killing is in some way connected with the election but Clark refuses either to admit complicity or to deny it.

The fog that envelops the mystery is still further thickened by the entrance of another character into the drama. Police are seeking June Taylor, alleged underworld hanger-on with a long record on the "blotter," and they hope to form a connection between her and Clark with a possible vista of a pre-election frameup in the background.

The Taylor woman, police say, is a former confidante of Albert Marco, the local vice chief who was sent to San Quentin by Clark when he was Deputy Prosecutor. It might be of interest to state here that in San Quentin with Marco is a former District Attorney of Los Angeles, Asa Keyes, so it seems that the film capital of the world has its dawns in real life with ever-changing roles—horror.

GARDEN TOOLS
Written for Central Press
By DR. KARL E. KELLERMAN
Bureau of Plant Industry
U. S. Department of Agriculture

The value of the gardener's time in relation to the value of the garden determines the expense he is warranted in going to in providing labor-saving equipment.

horticulturists of the Bureau of Plant Industry. Seedsmen and plantmen usually carry a good assortment of tools and their catalogues offer suggestions.

For hedge trimming, there is an automatic trimmer much like a farm hay mower. It does a neat job and does the work more rapidly than shears.

Wheel hoes speed up the work of cultivating. They come provided with interchangeable hoes, cultivating teeth, plows, and rakes. Some even have a seed drill. They are useful in sowing a quantity of seed. They save time, and also do the work more uniformly.

In spraying and dusting devices for fighting insect pests and plant diseases, the gardener has wide choice. For the small garden, the kind that works like a bicycle pump is probably efficient enough. But for the more pretentious garden the work can be speeded up and done more thoroughly with the compressed air sprayer that delivers a continuous spray. Remember that spray guns of all kinds should be cleaned thoroughly after use.

Lawn sprinklers, pruning shears, trowels, plant stakes, hand cultivators, various kinds of flower pots and cut flower vases are all conveniences. Any device that speeds up and lightens the work gives the gardener more time to enjoy his garden and grounds.

Sylvia Sidney, whose debut in pictures was the result of Clara Bow's indisposition, gets another boost up the ladder by her selection by Samuel Goldwyn to replace Nancy Carroll in "Street Scene," Elmer Rice's screen adaptation of his Pulitzer prize play.

After her substitution for the Bow in "City Streets" opposite Gary Cooper, Miss Sidney played the principal feminine part in "An American Tragedy." Her last stage role was "Bad Girl."

Estelle Taylor has been signed to her second role in Goldwyn pictures. After playing with Ronald Colman in "The Unholy Garden," she gets an important role in "Street Scene." William Collier Jr. has the principal masculine role in this play.

Further United Artists plans: Mervyn LeRoy, the kid director,

Shirley Mason, once popular film player, now the wife of Sidney Landfield, the scenarist, is expecting a blessed event. Nancy Carroll and her sister Terry, are to play sisters in "Personal Maid" which Paramount is making in New York. Terry is a blonde and a third sister, Elsie, a brunette. When Dorothy Mackaill landed from Honolulu she introduced Horace Hough to ship news reporters as the man she intended to marry. Hough is an assistant director at Fox, is happily married, and has been widely kidded as a result of Dorothy's prank. Charles Darlington is an enthusiast for Theater Guild productions. Cupid Spans 20 Years To Bring Fifi Romance

When the Emancipated Fifty-one-Year-Old Mrs. Stillman Married Fowler McCormick, the Great God Mammon Was Ousted.

Mrs. and Mr. Fowler McCormick at Honeymoon Cottage

Mr. and Mrs. Bud Stillman as Mrs. James A. Stillman with husband in 1925.

When immediately after winning a final decree of divorce from James A. Stillman, New York banker, Mrs. Anne U. Stillman married Fowler McCormick, heir to the harvester millions, society gossips sat up and began to look about for a motive. Why, they ask, should a 51-year-old woman marry a man twenty years her junior? Not for money, because they've both more than they can use, then why? The gossips overlooked the most obvious reason. Love! There has been for years a strong bond of sympathy between McCormick and the woman who is now his wife. A staunch friend of her son "Bud," with whom he was at Princeton and for whom he acted as best man when he started society by marrying Lena Wilson, his mother's servant, Fowler McCormick helped Mrs. Stillman through the ordeal attendant upon the sensational trial in which the paternity of her son was the point at issue. His championship of Mrs. Stillman at that time and his subsequent efforts for her happiness leave no room for doubt as to the motive that was behind the May-December marriage.

EAST HAMPTON, L. I., June 11.—Here is a secluded nook on a Long Island promontory, with the rumbling Atlantic on one side and the whispering waters of the Sound on the other, is being written another canto in the love saga of the dynamic woman who, until a few days ago, was Mrs. Anne U. Stillman, sometimes known as "Fifi."

A bride again at fifty-one, the woman whose love affairs, marital difficulties, estrangements, reconciliations and final divorce have occupied more space in the newspapers than most of the big figures of our time, has started a new life with a new husband, twenty years her junior, confident that this time she has found permanent happiness.

The former Mrs. Stillman's divorce from James A. Stillman, big financial figure of New York, came as a surprise to many of their intimates as the couple seems to have been living in harmony for the past few years since their last reconciliation. But her marriage to Fowler McCormick was expected by most of those who were familiar with the strange bond of sympathy that has always existed between the middle-aged beauty and the scion of the harvester dynasty.

In most May and December romances, Cupid, instead of the traditional William Tell artillery, struts his stuff with a bankroll. In this instance, however, regardless of the disparity in ages, such a motive cannot be considered. McCormick, a son of Harold F. McCormick, the multi-millionaire harvester king and the former Edith Rockefeller, daughter of John D., is heir to something like $10,000,000 and his bride is wealthy enough in her own right to McCormicks started work as a common laborer in his father's harvester machine shop at Milwaukee, it was on Mrs. Stillman's advice, Later, Fowler visited the Stillman camp at Grand Anse, Quebec, as a guest of "Bud" Stillman whom he had befriended at Princeton, and became still more attached to "Bud's" mother. From then on, young McCormick was never far away from the house of Stillman. We find him acting as best man for "Bud" when the Stillman heir married Lena Wilson, a former servant of his mother. He came into the picture again when he was instrumental in effecting a reconciliation between "Fifi" and her banker husband because he thought he was working for the happiness of the woman he had grown to love.

And now we find him braving the glaring spotlight of publicity, the whispering tongues of scandal-mongers and the sensational chatter of gossips taking his stand by the side of the woman he loves and helping her to write a new chapter in her eventful life, a chapter of peace and happiness.
